Borah Opens Fire On Tax Increases For Low Incomes

Gathering Storms Imperil Any Bill

House Opposition Sure; Long Threatening Filibuster.

By Felix Bruner.

Senator Borah last night opened fire on the Senate Finance Committee's tax bill, assailing lowering of exemptions and increasing of rates on small incomes.

In attacking the bill, Senator Borah broke with Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, who insisted that the bill should increase the payments of even the smallest taxpayers.

"I do not see the justice or the wisdom, economically speaking," Senator Borah said, "of lowering the exemptions.

"Neither do I think we ought to increase the rates on small incomes. Families with small incomes are now paying more than their proportion of taxes and at the same time they are facing an increase in prices for food, clothing, fuel and rent.

Stiff Battle Starting.

"To increase taxes in this region and among these taxpayers is to accentuate their burden which is already heavy enough and necessarily to lower their standard of living."

Senator Borah's statement, together with one by Senator Long in which he declared that he would "speak at some length" on the bill and that "share-the-wealth" was "going in," indicated the beginning of a stiff fight in the Senate.

Passage of the Senate bill, which differs almost completely from that passed by the House, undoubtedly would mean a prolonged battle in conference in an attempt to reconcile the two measures. Terms of all members of the House will expire at the end of next year and many would not relish the job of explaining why they increased the tax burden of small wage and salary earners.

Blow to Adjournment.

Senator Borah's statement concerning the lowering of exemptions referred to the provision of the Senate bill which would cut the exemption of married persons from $2,500 to $2,000 and that of single persons to $800. Under the bill even a single man on relief, receiving $94 a month, would be compelled to pay an income tax if he reveived relief wages for an entire year.

The Senate tax bill was seen as a blow to hopes of early adjournment. Long's hint that he might attempt a filibuster added to uneasiness.

Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee hopes to report the bill either today or tomorrow and debate is expected to begin immediately. Senator Harrison said he expected the Senate to pass the bill this week, but other members were not so sure. It is even possible, because of the wide difference between the House and Senate versions of the measure, that passage of any tax bill may be blocked for the present session.

White House Is Silent.

With President Roosevelt on his week-end fishing trip on Chesapeake Bay, the White House was silent concerning the Senate tax bill. Its provisions are far different from those recommended by the President, who asked merely for increased taxes on very high incomes, on inheritance levy, higher gift taxes and a graduated scale of corporation taxes, providing higher rates for larger corporate incomes.

It was estimated that the proposed tax schedule would require 1,500,000 persons not now paying income taxes to join the payers. Members of Congress who are looking toward the next election, while declining to comment for publication pending actual introduction of the bill, felt that the measure, if passed, could not help having an important bearing on the vote next year.

In addition to 1,500,000 additional taxpayers, it was estimated that another 1,500,000 persons whose exemptions would relieve them from paying taxes would be required to file returns. This would increase the total number of returns from 4,000,000 to 7,000,000.

Night Sessions Talked.

These figures compare with the fact that persons with incomes of $50,000 or more, the only ones affected by the House bill, number only 7,974.

With prolonged debate on the tax bill certain, possibility of night sessions of the Senate were being discussed. Besides the tax bill, Congress still has considerable unfinished business that must be disposed of before adjournment.

This includes:

Banking bill—Conferees plan to meet today and hope to dispose of it this week. Several differences already have been settled.

Guffey coal bill—Ways and Means Committee of the House expected to report today.

DOWN BY THE RIVER.

All I Ask Is a Tall Ship.

ALONG the waterfront the row of somber red brick market buildings was strangely still . . . In the channel clean, white yachts swayed forward, then back, forward, then back, making lazy, rhythmical tugs at the ropes which held them . . . A few sailing ships, gaunt and weatherbeaten, reared naked masts toward the sun . . . The languor of a summer afternoon had setted down on the river . . . At first the only sounds to be heard were the soft swish of waters against the anchored craft and the melancholy call of a fog horn summoning the Capital Yacht Club's dinghy to bring persons ashore —persons who were fleeing the quiet and coming into town to the movies . . .The afternoon deepened . . . Women in shorts and blouses, men in slacks and undershirts, appeared on the decks of the yachts . . . The dinghy began taking visitors from town out to the boats . . . The visitors, most of them, were looking for parties. But the stillness of the river swept over them and left their voices soft, their manner languid . . . They sat, for the most part, sipping drinks and smoking . . . Their cigarettes made small arcs as they were thrown into the water . . . On a small, squarish boat a motorcycle policeman swabbed the handkerchief-sized deck . . . He paused now and then to pull a shapeless beret farther down on his shiny forehead . . . "Sure, I spend all my Sundays here," grinned Joe Comiskey. "Sometimes I do a little sailing, but it's plenty nice right here in the channel. Tonight I'll take the boat and go down to hear the symphony. Almost everybody pulls out of here to go hear the music. It's swell, coming out over the water." The motorcycle policeman grinned again . . . On the 40-foot Tyche, far out in the channel, were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Chamberlin, spending Sunday afternoon as it was being spent in bungalows and cottages all over America . . . The Chamberlins were dressed in comfortable old clothes . . . They were surrounded by newspapers . . . Mr. Chamberlin was doing little odd jobs about the boat . . . Their young son, tired of the quiet, had left the Tyche to make endless trips in the yacht club's sun-blistered dinghy as it shuttled between craft and landing . . . The Chamberlins live on their boat . . . It is their home in Washington . . . They sailed in it from Chicago, coming down the Mississippi to the Gulf, then up the coast . . . They know almost every other boat in the channel . . . "It's like a little colony here," said Mrs. Chamberlin. "We're all good neighbors. But we don't board each other's boat in the casual way we would run into each other's houses. It's quiet here. And cool. I don't know whether I'll ever be happy again in a house or apartment" . . .

White House Firm Against WPA Strike

15,000 Men at New York Due to Quit Today Over Low Pay.

President Roosevelt and Harry L. Hopkins, Administration relief boss, returned to Washington from a week-end fishing trip last night facing a serious menace to their program brought about by the spreading strike of emergency relief workers.

With 15,000 union workers called on strike in New York today and reports that others would follow, in protest against low subsistence wages, the situation was nearing a showdown.

There was every indication, however, that President Roosevelt intends to stand firm in his decision that persons on relief who refuse to work will receive no other form of assistance from the Government.

This stand was reiterated yesterday by Aubrey Williams, assistant works progress director, to a group representing the national co-ordinating committee of rank and file groups in social work. The group represented relief workers in New York, Cleveland, Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Washington.

Wage Appeal Rejected.

The committee demanded payment of prevailing wages instead of the subsistence wages, ranging from $19 to $94 a month, paid to relief workers. Williams told them that the policy had been determined by Congress and that it would not be changed. He told them that in many instances relief wages are above those paid in some kinds of private employment.

Accompanying President Roosevelt on his trip, besides Hopkins, were Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, and Senator Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky. While no intimation was forthcoming that anything besides fishing was discussed, it is probable that not only the relief problem but the congressional situation were gone over. The party left Friday afternoon shortly after President Roosevelt expressed himself on the relief strikes.

Meanwhile, the Associated Press quoted George Meany, president of the New York State Federation of Labor, as saying that WPA officials "may be able to get enough men to report to make it look like the job is manned, but if they try to put them to work, they won't work."

Work Rules Flexible.

He said that under a WPA rule men who merely check in will draw pay whether or not they work.

Labor leaders in New York, the Associated Press said, also attacked the "no work, no relief" ultimatum of President Roosevelt.

Langdon W. Post, tenement house commissioner, buttressed by the presidential decree that a walkout of relief workers could not be construed as a strike, said he would put to work men from the National Reemployment Service rolls if workmen did not return today to the Astor low-cost housing project on the lower East Side of New York. Union leaders doubted that men on the re-employment rolls would consent to replace strikers.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, the Associated Press said, continued to struggle with the problem of whether to admit to city-financed home relief the strikers who may be cut off from Federal aid.

Plane Lands in Chink Among 2,000 Autos

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—A Thrush monoplane made a forced landing at Coney Island today in so small a space that it will have to be dismantled for removal.

Thousands of bathers scattered as the ship, an over-the-city excursion plane, slid safely to earth, fitting snugly into a chink in a block of 2,000 parked automobiles.

The pilot and six passengers—two of them children—stepped out unhurt. The plane was not damaged.

Ernst Marquis, who had taken off from Floyd Bennett Airport a few minutes earlier, said the parking space at the beach was the only possible landing place.

Hitler Claims God Aided Nazi Rise to Power

Catholic Drive Pressed; Storm Troops Shout for Jewish Deaths.

The German Situation.

Hitler, in a speech, backs drive on Jews and "political Catholics" as Nazi secret police spread first dragnet for opposition clergy.

Vienna hints that Austria and Germany may call off their two-year-old quarrel and seek closer cooperation.

Tension between Nazis and the Pope at Rome relaxes after the Bishop of Berlin visits the pontiff.

By the United Press.

Berlin, Aug. 11.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler today threw in his lot with Nazi campaigners against "political Catholicism," Jews, and other "enemies of the state" while Prussian Premier Hermann Goering's secret police spread their first Sabbath dragnet beneath the pulpits of opposition clergy.

Breaking his silence for the first time since the Nazis moved on four fronts to make the Reich wholly national socialistic, Hitler appeared on a public platform at Rosenheim, Bavaria, to attack "political Catholicism" and to tell the world that Germany is undaunted by overseas criticism of Nazi policies.

"I am convinced that nobody anywhere in the world can attack the Reich," Hitler said, throwing down the gantlet to assailants of his regime abroad.

"We want peace and we want to rebuild Germany. But those who try to disturb our peace will meet no longer a nation of pacifists. They will meet a nation of men. This fact is more proof of peace than speeches."

Among "Old Guard."

Hitler was among old friends—the "old guard" of the Nazis who went through the Munich "beer cellar putsch" with him in the days when nobody believed he would come to supreme power.

He directed his darts against "political Catholicism," ignoring the other Nazi campaigns against Jews, Free Masons and the Stahlhelm war veterans.

"To those who think they have an exclusive claim to heaven's blessing I say that the national socialistic movement is Germany. Fifteen years ago, I may say, I had nothing but my faith. I will say the same today. Without my faith, without Almighty God's blessing, the Nazi movement in Germany would not have been possible."

The Reichsfuehrer told his veteran supporters that the church can not oppose Nazi principles because they are "the principles approved by God" and which saved Germany in her darkest hour.

"In 500 years the swastika flag will have become inseparable from the heart of Germany," he said. He threatened destruction of the enemies of national socialism:

"If they want a fight they may have it. We shall crush them so they will not want to fight again."

Bavarian With Him.

F. Wagner, Bavaria's interior minister, appeared on the same platform with Hitler. He denounced "political Catholicism" and, turning to the anti-Semitic campaign, said that national socialism will not seek to solve the Jewish question by strong-arm methods.

To address his loyal supporters Hitler traveled from his summer villa at Obersalzberg where he had been cheered enthusiastically by thousands of pilgrims.

Germany's Sabbath was marked by the most intensive anti-Catholic drive since Goering a month ago began sending his secret police to church to censor the sermons of the clergy.

Throughout the Reich, Catholics and Jews bore the brunt of the Nazi party struggle between conservatives and extremists while Brown Shirt adherents rejoiced that Budapest reports of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's death were untrue.

To prove himself alive, Hitler appeared at his summer villa near Obersalzberg. He received the enthusiastic cheers of thousands of pilgrims who had waited hours to glimpse him and assure themselves he is in perfect health. Hitler later motored to Rosenheim to speak at the celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of the local Nazi unit.

At Oberhausen in the Rhineland Father Henrich Kueppers, Catholic priest, was arrested on charges of "irresponsible utterances" ridiculing Goebbels' decrees. He was

Auto Makers Set to Spend $50,000,000

General Motors Plan to Expand Plants Major Project Since 1929.

National Income in 1934 Found $5,000,000,000 More Than 1933.

Business Developments.

At New York the General Motors Corporation announced a $50,000,000 plant expansion program, the largest such project since 1929.

At Washington a report of the Division of Economic Research of the Commerce Department estimated the national income in 1934 at $49,400,000,000, an increase of $5,000,000,000 over that of 1933.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

New York, Aug. 11.—General Motors Corporation tonight announced a $50,000,000 plant expansion program—the largest such operation since the start of the depression—which swelled the total of recent industrial building to around $100,000,000.

The building program was particularly significant to the financial district inasmuch as it bespoke confidence of industry in business recovery.

The General Motors program envisages building in several parts of the country and includes:

Improvements to Fisher body plant of around $2,500,000.

Allison Engine Corporation plant in Indianapolis.

Profit Increased.

President Alfred P. Sloan, jr., in announcing the program traced the expenditures to encouragement from a more assured outlook for profitable development. The announcement came in connection with the company's second quarter earnings report which showed net profit after preferred dividends of $49,924,912 equivalent to $1.17 a share, as compared with 88 cents a share in the second quarter of 1934. Six months profit was equivalent to $1.85 a share compared with $1.51 a share in the 1934 period.

Meanwhile other major industrial companies were planning or carrying out expansion programs including:

Bethlehem Steel Corporation, $5,000,000 plant at Sparrows Point, Md.

Granite City Steel Co., $3,500,000 program.

Nestor Glass Co., $235,000 program.

Union Bag & Paper Co., $4,000,000 plant at Savannah, Ga.

Chrysler Corporation allotment of $7,000,000, much of which will go into improvements and expansion.

Meet Optimism.

These developments coincide with optimism in financial quarters concerning business improvement in the next few months and furnish the background for investment interest in securities which has forced share prices into new high ground for the year or longer.

The national income in 1934 exceeded that of 1933 by $5,000,000,000, the Division of Economic Research of the Commerce Department estimated yesterday. The national income for 1934 was given as $49,400,000,000, as compared with $44,400,000,000 in 1933.

Each of the 12 major industrial groups, according to the department

Hoover Asks Roosevelt To Define Dictator Aim; Capital Sees Bid for '36

Leaders See Hoover Statement As Bid for Nomination in 1936

Nye Warns G. O. P. That Nation Is Not Prepared to Return to 'Old Deal;' Vinson Says President Has Sought No Constitutional Changes.

By the Associated Press.

Herbert Hoover's Chicago statement on the Constitution was quickly interpreted in both Democratic and Republican quarters yesterday as a 1936 presidential bid.

But there was no indication that President Roosevelt, out of the city over the week-end, planned to propose any constitutional changes before Congress adjourns, plans the former Chief Executive demanded be made public. One Democrat, Representative Vinson, of Kentucky, said "no constitutional amendment has been submitted and nobody has said that one will be."

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, who recently predicted a third party next year, said the Hoover statement lent emphasis to "a perfect willingness and desire to be the Republican candidate next year," while Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, said it "obviously is what he intends to be his real opening bid for the Republican presidential nomination."

Representative Snell, the Republican leader, found the former President's demand for immediate information on what constitutional changes are proposed by the New Deal "the most pertinent question Herbert Hoover has asked."

Senator Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, said he did not believe the statement had any significance as to Mr. Hoover's political plans.

"He could make that kind of a statement whether he inteded to be a candidate or not," Steiwer added. "And others have said much the same thing recently, including Senator Borah."

Snell, who has been mentioned as a 1936 Republican possibility, declined comment when questioned on the political aspects of the Hoover statement, while Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michi-

Borah Favored As G.O.P. Hope In Straw Vote

County Chairmen, Leaders in U. S. Cities Put Knox 2d, Hoover 6th.

A Nation-wide straw vote taken among Republican county chairmen and other local Republican leaders yesterday showed Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, as first choice for the Republican nomination for President. Second choice was Col. Frank C. Knox, Chicago publisher, and third, Gov. Landon, of Kansas. Herbert Hoover ran in sixth place.

The poll was taken by Robert H. Lucas, former executive director of the Republican National Committee. Lucas sent letters to 2,400 Republican county chairmen, 300 city leaders and 500 "young Republicans." A total of 1,565 replies, representing 1,036 counties, was received.

Lucas asked the local leaders to vote on a list of 11 possible candidates. In addition to those included in his list, Lucas said, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh received several votes and Alfred E. Smith was proposed by two voters as a Republican vice presidential candidate. Lucas asked those who were polled to indicate first and second choices.

Choices indicated follow:

	First.	Second.
Senator Borah	247	121
Col. Knox	167	99
Gov. Landon	127	106
Senator Vandenberg	97	108
Frank O. Lowden	88	107

Theodore Roosevelt	41	66
Ogden Mills	40	47
Representative Fish	38	55
Senator Dickinson	28	36
Rep. Wadsworth	17	30
All others	94	152

Included in the "all others" list, besides Col. Lindbergh, were Gov. Winant of New Hampshire, former Gov. Canfield of Missouri, Representative-elect Risk, of Rhode Island; Gov. Merriam of California and former Senator Otis Glen, of California.

New York—Borah, 4; Fish, 3; Hoover, 2; Knox, 5; Wadsworth, 2; others, 5.

Pennsylvania—Borah, 8; Fish, 1; Hoover, 3; Knox, 4; Landon, 3; Lowden, 1; Mills, 4; Roosevelt, 3; Vandenberg, 2; Wadsworth, 1; others, 4.

Ex-Executive Silent As to Candidacy

Argues People Should Know of Aims to Alter Constitution.

The Political Scene.

Former President Hoover challenged President Roosevelt to tell the people how far he will go in his "dictatorial demands" and what constitutional changes he proposes.

Both Democrats and Republicans in Washington interpret the Hoover statement as a bid for the Presidency next year.

Nation-wide straw vote among local Republican leaders shows Senator Borah to be the first choice, Col. Frank C. Knox, Chicago publisher, second, and Gov. Landon of Kansas, third.

By the United Press.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—Former President Herbert Hoover, whose recent activities have made him a "mystery man" among Republican leaders, today challenged President Roosevelt to tell the people how far he intends to go with his "dictatorial demands."

"The time has come when his full purposes should be disclosed," said the former President, en route to New York.

"The Nation has a right to know before this session of Congress ends what changes the Administration proposes in the Constitution."

The strongly worded challen was delivered as Hoover, enteri his sixty-second year, stepped fr the Overland Limited to be gre by cheering and handclapping. arrival had been unnoticed unti photographer began taking his pic ture. Then a small crowd gathered and applauded.

Sees Changes Planned.

"The last two years," he said, "have made it clear that the Administration intends to bring about a fundamental change in the structure and balance of powers in our Government as distinguished from the normal development of the Constitution to meet specific problems as ofttimes in the past.

"This has been evident from the demands made upon and the surrender by Congress to the President of powers reaching dictatorial dimensions and in the invasion of State's rights.

"For two years primary liberties of the people have been trampled upon."

Hoover said that the Supreme Court "called a halt" to part of the concentration of power by the New Dealers.

"But the President," he added, "in his criticism of the Supreme Court, his reference to 'horse-and-buggy' days and to the powers of European governments revealed that these were not emergency measures as had been asserted when they were passed."

Decries Numerous Bills.

"Further, we see a demand from the President not to permit doubts as to the constitutionality of a proposed law to block its passage and we listen to urging from members of the Administration that the Constitution mus be revised.

"These things can have no other meaning than a continuous intent to change the Constitution directly so as to authorize such acts and such concentration of powers or to accomplish them indirectly."

The former President said that even though the Administration persuades the people to "ill-advised action" he regarded it as "better for liberty to commit suicide in the open rather than be poisoned by indirection in the Capital of the Nation."

Police Admiral on Swan Boat Routs Tidal Basin Swimmers

A battle of wits between a small army of police and two almost unclad swimmers who had invaded the sacred waters of the Tidal Basin, where only ducks and swans are allowed, ended in a moral victory yesterday for the minions of the law.

For more than an hour the frolicking mermen, encouraged by several hundred amused spectators who lined the railing, invited the policemen to jump in and get them.

In the original group were five swimmers who dived into the water on the Fourteenth street side of the floodgate. Three made their escape when police arrived. The other two climbed over the floodgate into the basin.

"Come out of there," ordered the policemen.

"Come on in and get us," was the reply.

This suggestion did not seem to appeal to the police. They sent for help. Two radio cars arrived, as well as a detachment of motorcycle and park policemen. This display of force drove the swimmers to the middle of the Basin.

A general staff of the land police held a conference and decided to send for the police navy, but the boats could get only as far as the floodgate.

Another conference was held.

"Why don't you fellows behave yourselves and come in to shore like gentlemen," pleaded the police.

"Why don't you guys act like cops and come out and get us," was the rejoinder.

"We have your clothes," warned the police.

"You can have them," was the generous response.

Another conference was held. The police detail, which had now grown to about 15 decided to surround the basin.

A thought occurred to one of the policemen. With three others he commandeered the swan boat and got close to the swimmers who had been splashing around for nearly an hour.

The swimmers started for a ladder, intending to make a run for a taxicab.

"Now get into shore and get there fast," said the admiral on the bridge of the swan boat.

"If you want us to go any faster, come in and give us a push," was the dare.

As they neared shore, the swimmers posed obligingly for pictures. One pair of pants was missing and the pantless swimmer draped a shirt about him.

"What's the idea?" demanded the officers.

"Just cooling off."

"You can cool off in the Fourth Precinct," said the cop.

They were charged with swimming in the Tidal Basin.

Mad Sailor, 100 Miles Out, Leaps Into Sea at Bidding of Specters

By the United Press.

Boston, Aug. 11.—A deranged fisherman dived from his ship into Atlantic waters 100 miles off Cape Cod today in response to what he imagined to be a dare from President Roosevelt and J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

Unknown to his shipmates, Walter (Frenchy) Robillard, 32, of Brighton, a husky 6-footer, leaped from the deck of the Boston trawler Notre Dame north of Georges Banks on the fishing grounds.

Rescued against his will by the crew of the Bridgeport, Conn., oysterman Ripple, Robillard was landed here by a Coast Guard amphibian plane that made a round-trip flight of some 350 miles. To attaches of Marine Hospital he told a fantastic story.

He was standing on the deck of the Notre Dame, he said, when he saw the faces of the President and Hoover clearly outlined on the waters, daring him to come in. On the instant, he said, he leaped into the "shark-infested waters" to show them he was unafraid.

Robillard, who seemed lucid enough at times, said he was in the water half an hour. Doctors, however, thought he may have been in a much longer time.

Robillard is a mechanic by trade, but makes an occasional trip to the fishing grounds. He shipped on the Notre Dame, operated by the Atlantic & Pacific Fish Co., a week ago.

Robillard recovered quickly after his long swim in shoes, heavy trousers and sweater. He will be removed to Boston Psychopathic Hospital for observation.

Bills Altering Army Records Killed by Veto

By the Associated Press.

Repeated presidential vetoes have failed to halt persistent congressional passage of bills intended to correct military records.

Thirteen times since Congress met, President Roosevelt has objected to singling out a sailor, soldier or Marine for preferential treatment.

But Congress in the past always has come back with another of the same kind of bill, just as it has many times in previous administrations.

In each case, Mr. Roosevelt has expressed his attitude in a special message vetoing a private bill. Most of them are designed to clear the records for a man who left the service under a cloud.

The effect of most changes would have been to grant or increase pensions.

"Would single out for preferential treatment one individual of a large but undetermined number of former soldiers whose status is identical with that of the man under discussion."

"* * * be discrimination against many others."

"* * * constitute a legislative pardon for a man whose status is now that of a deserter and place him on a par with those who rendered service of a character which earned for them honorable discharges."

"* * * be unjustly discriminatory * * *."

"Be * * * discriminatory special legislation * * *."

Barbara Reveals MdivaniMoneyPact

Was to Pay Late Prince $350,000 Annually.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 11.—A Reuters (British) news agency dispatch from Copenhagen today said Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow, the former Barbara Hutton, disclosed that after her divorce from the late Prince Alexis Mdivani, she was to pay him 70,000 pounds sterling (about $350,000) annually.

She declined to comment on the report that Mdivani, who was killed in an automobile accident in Spain, had left her 400,000 pounds sterling, but intimated a report involving such an amount could hardly be correct.

It was probable, she said, the value of his palace in Venice and other property would amount to 400,000 pounds.

The countess and her husband will go to London August 13, it was learned. Today they spent in their usual routine of tennis and automobile riding. Ten guests attended dinner at Hardenberg Castle.

Gerona, Spain, Aug. 11 (AP).—The Baroness Maude von Thyssen, companion of Prince Alexis Mdivani in a fatal motor car smash recently, does not know the prince is dead, it was said today at the hospital. She was reported "considerably better."

Blazes Menacing Northwest Forests

Smoke-Laden Skies Warn of Danger Season.

By the Associated Press.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 11.—Smoke-laden skies over northern Idaho and western Montana today held a gloomy warning for foresters that the feared annual fire season in the four heavily timbered Pacific Northwest States is at hand.

From every section of the vast timbered domain came alarming reports of fire hazards. Tinder-dry forests need only a spark to set flames roaring on their devastating course.

The largest single conflagration was in Glacier National Park in Montana and Waterton Lake Park across the Canadian boundary. More than 20,000 acres of timber was burned, National forest officials estimated. Lightning was blamed.

Buenos Aires, Aug. 11 (AP).—The newspaper La Prensa says it has learned that Hugh Wilson, United States president of the committee of the Chaco peace conference dealing with exchange and repatriation of prisoners, has proposed that all Bolivian and Paraguayan prisoners be freed now by the neutral military commission.

Preference would be given to wounded soldiers, students, or those who are older or whose presence is most necessary to their countries.

Selassie Builds Fort to Guard Vital Rail Link

Will Protect Bridge to Prevent Isolation of Addis Ababa.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Aug. 11.—Emperor Haile Selassie, determined that his capital's only modern means of reaching the outside world be kept open, is building a modern fort equipped with antiaircraft guns at a point where the Ethiopian railroad crosses the Awash River about 150 miles from here.

The railroad bridge is a vital link between Addis Ababa and the seacoast. It crosses a great gorge and was constructed by the French 20 years ago at great cost.

Since it is the largest bridge on the French-owned railroad that runs eastward to Djibouti, it would be an easy prey for planes, and its destruction night isolate Addis Ababa for a year or more.

Similar measures have been taken at other bridges, but efforts have been concentrated at the Awash following continued arrival of Italian troops in her East African colonies.

The fort, constructed with the greatest secrecy, has reached an advanced stage for defense against both ground and air attacks.

It is hidden both from passing trains and from aerial observers, lying in a depression near the railway.

Unconfirmed rumors circulated also have it that a battalion of French Senegalese may defend the bridge in case of war.

Authorities regard as suspicious a recent wreck on the railroad, caused by stones placed on the rails. Traffic was tied up for two days.

Destruction of the big bridge, it was pointed out, might be a vital blow to Ethiopia inasmuch as munitions could not reach the plateau.

It is understood the Emperor will make no attempt to achieve aerial equality with Mussolini. His antiquated airforce is hopelessly outclassed by the armada Italy is assembling in Eritrea.

Cost of such an airforce for Ethiopia would be prohibitive.

Hitler Claims God Aided Nazis' Rise ordered tried also on charges of making anti-Nazi remarks while visiting a restaurant in the town of Muelheim.

A Catholic priest at Kirchenschoenbach, Bavaria, was fined 500 marks and sent to prison for 100 days for his failure to greet the Hitler youth flag. He was charged also with holding meetings of Catholic organizations banned by the Nazis.

In Berlin, F. Haiden, director of the German Farmers Union, appealed to all farmers in Germany not to allow their children to become members of confessional youth organizations.

"Members of such organizations risk being influenced by a spirit hostile to the state," he explained.

Two trucks laden with Storm Troopers thundered up and down the Kurfuerstendamm, Berlin's Broadway, waving swastika flags and shouting at bewildered guests in the crowded cafes and restaurants:

"There will be no peace in the world until the last Jew is killed."

At Eisenchmid, Rhineland, Karl Samuel, a Jew, was arrested for "race pollution." Elsewhere in the Reich, Jews were turned away from the summer resorts.

Artistic circles specuated on the action of Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels in removing Otto Leers from presidency of the Reich's theater chamber. His assistant, Franz Eckhardt, was ousted Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

Free City of Danzig, Aug. 11.—Nazi sympathizers received Victor Lutze, chief of the Reich's Storm Troopers with bands and banners today as he arrived to inspect Brownshirt followers.

"Storm Troopers," he announced, "have been kept in the background for some time. Opponents have interpreted this to be a sign of weakness, but that is a profound error. Storm Troopers do not compete with the regular army, which is the sole arms-bearing organization of the Reich, but they are still an army which represents a world political idea and therefore are as indispensable as ever."

Selassie Held Ready to Give Land to Italy

Reported Willing to Trade Part of Territory for Port and Loans.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 11.—The Havas News Agency, reported tonight from Addis Ababa Emperor Haile Selassie announced Ethiopia was willing to cede part of her territory to Italy in exchange for an outlet to the sea and financial assistance.

"Our government always wanted to obtain loans for development of the country and for speeding up works of civilization which have been undertaken," the Emperor told interviewers.

"But another means of aiding the economic development of the country is to obtain a port for Ethiopia and if it would fulfill our two aspirations we would see no objections to ceding part of Ogaden," he was quoted as saying.

The Emperor, it was reported, first stressed the view "we do not wish the independence of the country to be touched. Neither do we desire that offense should be given to Italian prestige."

Outlining what might be done, he was quoted as saying "against the advantages of a financial and economical nature such as the concession of a loan and the cession of a port such as Anthony Eden of Britain has already proposed in the interests of peace, we can envisage the cession of a portion of territory.

"The realization of an understanding on this basis would involve numerous details the importance of which it is not necessary to underline and which would have to be discussed."

Rome Is Scornful.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Aug. 11.—Informed circles expressed deep scorn tonight at reports from Addis Ababa that Emperor Haile Selassie had indicated a willingnes sto concede a portion of Ogaden to Italy for a heavy financial loan or an outlet to the sea.

With Italy reportedly possessing a new and powerful weapon for aerial attack in the event of war with Ethiopia and the nation continuing its military preparations at emergency speed, authoritative quarters said Italians felt Ethiopia's reported offer constitute da last-minute effort to interest other nations in "a strip of sand."

While it was conceded other nations miht be interested in this reported offer by the Ethiopian Emperor, it was asserted Italy could not be interested in the "sand trap" and in other concessions which assertedly do not meet Premier Mussolini's idea for "total solution" of the problem.

New Aerial Weapon.

Italian sources were equally scornful of reports that the Emperor said he did not desire "to force a loss of Italian prestige." Italy, it was insisted, has not lost prestige in its dealings with Ethiopia and "does not intend to do so."

It was suggested if the Emperor found himself so "jealous" of Italy's prestige, he should be wlling to treat with Italy on a basis of the treaty of 1928 between the two nations.

The new Italian weapon for aerial attack, details of which were carefully withheld, was said to have been tried out during naval maneuvers at Spezia yesterday in the presence of Premier Mussolini himself and to the entire satisfaction of naval and military officers.

Maneuvers Successful.

The Italian press pointed to the success of aerial and tactical maneuvers held Thursday and Friday among the rocky Alpine passes as well as those at Spezia as proof that Italy is more than ready to meet the Ethiopian army, now reported reaching a mobilization point of 700,000.

Described as a "classic measure," already utilized by other countries to avert inflation, the government tomorrow will increase the discount rate of the Bank of Italy from 3½ to 4½ per cent.

A spokesman said conditions caused by accelerated industrial activity, attributed in part to Italy's preparation for war, led to the move.

Eden Back in London.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 11.—Anthony Eden, Great Britain's minister for League of Nations affairs, returned today to London after a short rest in Yorkshire.

He will confer tomorrow with foreign office experts concerning Great Britain's policy at the tripower conference on the Italo-Ethiopian dispute in Paris this week.

Eden will leave for Paris Thursday.

Eden revealed July 1 to an astounded House of Commons that he had offered to cede a strip of British territory to Ethiopia if such a step would bring peace between that country and Italy.

The British cession, according to the plan he disclosed, would be used to facilitate any territorial and economic concessions from Ethiopia to Italy.

The British concession offered Ethiopia, it was explained, would be in British Somaliland, giving Ethiopia access to the sea.

Disclosure of the plan aroused a storm of protest both in the Commons and in the British press.

Nations Buying Supplies

By the United Press.

London, Aug. 11.—Italy and Ethiopia are buying large quantities of foodstuffs on thee ve of the threatened East Africa war, reports from many countries showed today.

Bombay reported export of vast stores to both Italian and Ethiopian forces. Indian businessmen have formed a trading company to deal with both nations through the French port, Djibouti.

Warsaw newspapers said an increasing number of Italian agents have appeared in Pomerellen and eastern Galicia to place heavy orders for bacon and canned meats. Theo rders will be shipped directly to East Africa.

Italy was reported buying wheat, horses and other goods on a large scale in Hungary. Budapest reported the government feared purchasing operations were responsible for rising living costs in Hungary.

Into The Outdoors

[Where Depression's Forgotten]

Throngs of Voyagers Easily Shed Troubles in Mountains Amidst Wild Life of the West.

By Lora Kelly

THE old gray mare of economic security isn't what she used to be—but she's going places just the same.

Certainly if the surge of summer travel to the playgrounds of the Northwest is any indication of the state of the Nation's pocketbook, the price of pork isn't worrying a sizable section of the citizenry.

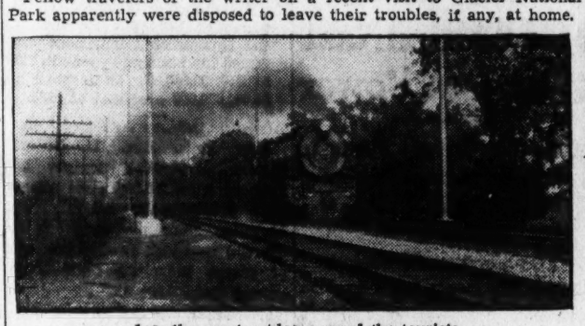
Since no edict has gone forth to plow under every third tourist, Rosinante has taken to the road again and resorts are flourishing throughout the country. Sixteen railroads report an average gain of at least 30 per cent for June and July over last year. Airlines and motor companies record similar increases.

For one thing, railroads have got around to making a train trip in the summer a joy instead of an ordeal. With the air-conditioning of sleeping cars, day coaches and diners, the wayfarer on a 1935 journey goes pleasantly to his destination. No longer annoyed by cinders in his eye, soot on his nose, and perspiration down his neck, he can enjoy the beauties of the landscape with no minor irritations.

Even though one may be sartorially immaculate, the porter still offers to brush one off, but that is one of the quaint old Pullman customs not lightly to be discarded.

Lower fares to higher altitudes is another lure to the prospective vacationist bogged down in humidity. Even with only the traditional two weeks' leave, a coast-to-coast trip and return can be negotiated by rail if the tripper doesn't mind keeping his mind on time tables. The Western trek can be accomplished in much speedier fashion than a few years ago.

Fellow travelers of the writer on a recent visit to Glacier National Park apparently were disposed to leave their troubles, if any, at home.



Into the great outdoors speed the tourists.

Only when informed that I came from Washington were there any signs of gloom.

The gentleman from Chicago in the observation car was doubtful about "the situation." Out in the spacious terrain beyond Chicago the state of the Nation's welfare was generally referred to as "the situation." But he was willing to give the Administration the benefit of the doubt.

"I suppose Roosevelt is doing the best he can," he commented. Not so the prosperous-looking Republican in the next chair. He rose to remark and his language was plain.

"I think everybody in Washington must be going haywire," he snorted. "Roosevelt can't possibly be re-elected. Now take this tax program——"

Before anybody had a chance to take this tax program, the white-coated Filipino arrived with a tray of iced beverages.

Party feeling cooled off immediately and the conversation veered to the prospect of rainbow trout in Swift Current Lake.

Back in the sleeper, the school teacher from Minneapolis was already launched in a political dissertation. She was an arden defender of the New Deal and was encountering opposition. The argument was waxing hot.

"Maybe things do look all mixed up, like a jig-saw puzzle," she asserted, "but I believe the President knows exactly how it is going to look when it's finished and it isn't up to us to criticize him."

The social worker from New York started to reply with something about the unemployed as she opened up her knitting bag.

Indignation turned to admiration. "Oh, what a lovely color!" exclaimed the teacher. "How many stitches do you cast on for the skirt?" So once more our national destinies were dumped in the presidential lap.

It was curious to note, however, that few of these lower-berth commentators regarded Congress or other Government officials as having any responsibilities. Everything about "the situation," good or bad, was up to the President.

Thus as we tumbled with the tumbleweed through the plains of North

Once inside the park the problems which irk Congress were even more remote. Somehow, among the mountains, capped with snows, all humans and their concerns seemed petty.

Pompous millionaires, tired clerks, society dowagers and stenographers mingled in the real democracy of the great out-doors.

Here was a lawyer from New Jersey whose ensemble would never have occurred to King Solomon in all his glory. Yellow shirt, flaming red bandana around his neck, chaps and high-heeled boots, all topped by a ten-gallon hat, made a vivid splash of color against the skyline—in hoss-wrangler vernacular, a "dude." But he could ride as well as the best of the guides.

The chalets on the peaks are modeled on the Alpine plan with supplies sent up from the valley by pack horse twice a week. Fresh milk is the only table commodity not available. There are no roads to these lofty hospices and cows are not very good mountain climbers.

But there are bears and deer and plenty of birds and flowers for the nature student to write home about. The ranger-naturalists give nightly lectures to the more serious minded. Specimens of the flowers and rock formations with scientific data were on display at all the camps where the Government naturalists made their headquarters. Visitors were cautioned at all time not to pick the wild flowers. Nobody seemed inclined to pick the wild bears.

Hikers are all over the place. Grinnell Glacier is a fairly easy climb, particularly with an expert guide.

Yes, indeed, the American people seem to be flocking to the quiet and peace of the mountains for a brief holiday. Whether they are apprehensive of trouble to come, or whether they believe that all's right with the world in general, or Washington in particular, they make the best of their holiday. Some of them are firmly convinced that it is folly to hoard savings for old age, and they are determined to gather ticket stubs while they may.

Italian-Negro Rioting Flares In Jersey City

5 Hurt as Knives Flash and Rocks Fly in Combat Over African Crisis.

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 11.—Smouldering bitterness over the Italo-Ethiopian war situation flared into open conflict today when armed mobs of Italians and Negroes clashed in the streets.

Knives flashed and clubs and fists flew as more than 100 rioters met in hand-to-hand combat. One rioter used a rifle as a club.

When 20 police armed with riot guns and tear gas bombs finally broke up the battle, five rioters were taken to Jersey City Medical Center for treatment. Eleven persons were arrested.

Police learned that two incidents up to now unreported, had fomented the disturbance. An Italian and his wife, they said, were beaten two nights ago as they stepped from an automobile at Maxwell and Coles streets, near where today's fight began.

Quarrel About Affair.

Last night Italians and Negroes argued about the affair, but the quarrel died down without violence.

About 3 p. m. today groups began to collect at Coles street and Railroad avenue on the edge of the "Village," an Italian settlement adjoining the Negro district.

Police said verbal exchanges over Joe Louis, Negro heavyweight contender who recently knocked out Primo Carnera, and the Italo-Ethiopian situation touched off the battle.

Within a few minutes after the first blows were struck, scores rushed into the fray to reinforce both sides. Milling, screaming groups clashed while 500 spectators cheered and urged them on.

Rocks and bottles were hurled. Baseball bats and knives were favorite weapons.

Led by Capt. Henry Gauthier, police reserves charged the crowd. They were able to break up the fight without resorting to riot guns or tear gas bombs with which they answered the alarm.

Hearing Slated.

They arrested a group of Italians and Negroes on various charges. All were held for a hearing in second criminal court tomorrow morning.

For hours after the general battle was ended, small groups collected in the neighborhood. Those who had been in the fight but escaped arrest and their friends glowered and muttered at rival gangs.

Ten extra police were kept in the district by Capt. Gauthier to guard against further outbreaks during the night. Squad cars cruised slowly through the neighborhood. The street at the scene of the clash was strewn with broken bottles, rocks and clubs.

Klondike Crowds Greet Post, Rogers

Flying Vacationists Hop for Canadian Frontier.

Dawson, Y. T., Aug. 11.—Unable to avoid camera snap-shooters and pretty girl autograph collectors even on the Klondike, Wiley Post, round-the-world flier, and Will Rogers, screen star, hopped off here late yesterday for Aklavik on the Canadian frontier.

From there, when the spirit moves them or the crowds of miners, traders and trappers become too large, they indicated here, the flying vacationists will proceed to Great Bear Lake, then toward the Arctic Circle to Nome which is, comparatively speaking, only a hop, step and a jump from Siberia, Post's announced destination.

Spanish War Bill On President's Desk

Pension Act to Be Vetoed or Signed by Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt has until midnight Tuesday to sign or veto the Spanish-American War pension bill.

The measure, which would wipe out the last remnant of the 1933 economy act, was approved by the Senate July 31 and sent to the White House on the following day.

The ten days given the President to study the bill will expire Tuesday. Sundays and holidays are not counted, nor is the first day a measure reaches the Executive's office. At the expiration of the ten-day period, without presidential action, it would become law automatically.

Reports that a veto would be forthcoming were heard last week after Mr. Roosevelt had received a report on the bill from Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, and Daniel Bell, acting director of the budget. The report emphasized that although the restored pensions would cost $46,000,000 the first year, no provision for payment had been made by Congress.

Not All Nazis Support 'Drive,' Pastor Says

Rev. Ewart E. Turner Long Preached in Germany at American Church.

A reaction against the "excessive racialism, anti-Semitism, and anti-Christianity" of Adolf Hitler and the totalitarian Nazis is setting in throughout Germany, the Rev. Ewart E. Turner, minister of the American Church in Berlin from 1930 to 1934, declared in a sermon here yesterday morning.

Returning two weeks ago from a tour of Germany, the pastor discussed "New Visions of God in Germany" in a union service sermon at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church. Congregations of All Souls, Unitarian and the Universalist National Memorial churches also were present.

The present internal struggle in Germany is not between church and state, but rather it is a fight between the church and a group attempting to set up a type of state which the overwhelming percentage of German people reject, Mr. Turner explained.

"Hitler himself is undecided which conception of the state he shall support," he said. "But he must make this decision soon if his experiment is not to be terminated.

"We who are outside of Germany see mostly the dark side of the Nazi struggle. We are apt to forget that for every radical Nazi fanatic there are four or five moderate Nazis. Sooner or later this condition must come to a head, because the German people will not stand for the excessive racialism and anti-Semitism and anti-Christianity of the totalitarian Nazis. But inside Germany one senses not only the truculence of the fanatics, but also the steadying forces of the more level-headed members of the movement.

Fanatics Not Germany.

"If we could know all the facts we would discover that the German spirit is not all one stream of anti-Semetism and paganism. However racially inflamed and nationalistically infected the German masses may be, there still are available the vast resources of sanity and moderation which we have come to associate with the term 'life.'

"The deeds and threats of the fanatics are not Germany. That is only the chief danger within Germany. For every fanatic among the Nazis there are half a dozen who feel he is spoiling their movement.

"Priests and pastors have been jailed and exiled from their parishes, but over 90 per cent of them still are active because the German people will not have it otherwise.

"A new vision of God is being found in that troubled country. Christians in Europe no longer trust 'human nature' in the optimistic liberalism of the prewar era. German Christianity never has been so strong as it is today. The church struggle already has shown success in bringing a greater measure of brotherly, sacrificial spirit in German religious life."

Church of Pilgrims.

The religious viewpoint in life gives experience of "wider horizons, deeper loyalties and more personal participation in the ongoing process of the universe," the Rev. Warren H. Stuart of Emporia, Kans., declared in a guest sermon yesterday morning in the Church of the Pilgrims.

Quoting the text from Romans 8:31, "If God be for us, who can be against us," Mr. Stuart, who is religious instructor in Emporia College, said: "Many things, indeed, can be against us—tribulation, distress, persecution, famine, nakedness, peril, the sword. Many things were, indeed, against St. Paul, the author of our text.

"Read the account of his trials as listed in II Corinthians 11:23. Yet none of these troubles could separate him from the love of Christ; in all of them he was conqueror and more than conqueror. And what was true for him can be true for you and me. 'If God be for us, who can be against us?'

"Three suggestive phrases will throw brilliant light upon these words as we try to think them through together:

I. Cosmic setting:

"You and I must think of our lives as part and parcel of this tremendous universe in which we live. Our interests are broader than our own locality; they are not limited to this earthly planet.

"This little earth is the only spot in the whole creation, as far as we know, where moral evil is found. God is for us even when sinners; how much more will He be for us, if we can disengage ourselves from sin and be wholly on His side.

"2. Eternal span—Our lives are not limited to a short stay on this planet. The total picture is large in space and long in time as well. Scientists tell us that the world has a long history behind it. They draw pictures of its gradual development through millions of years, a process reaching its climax in the creation of man who alone can possess moral values. Is it reasonable to suppose that such values once possessed, built through millions of years, can be extinguished forever by a microbe, a bullet in the brain, or a submergence in a few feet of water?

"Creative Personality."

"3. Creative personality—The immense universe and the endless ages of which we are so vital a part are meaningless without a living spirit. If that spirit be evil, we live in a bad universe, and we call him devil; if the spirit be indifferent we live in a mechancial world and we call its ruling spirit nature; if that spirit be good, we call Him God, the Supreme Good; and if we feel our kinship with Him, that we belong to Him, we call Him Father. And if we call Him Father, do we not feel that He is for us whatever may be against us?"

First Baptist Church.

The Rev. E. B. Jackson, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Harrisonburg, Va., recommended the "School of Jesus" for all who are "troubled and seek rest for their souls," when he preached as guest pastor at the First Baptist Church in Washington yesterday morning.

Using as his text the words of Christ, "come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden," he pointed out that Christ had the power of giving "great peace and quiet" and of restoring morale.

"The Christian must go by the way of the Cross," said the pastor. "Many today refuse the way of sacrifice which the Master trod and in which way we are to follow. The only way to learn the lesson is by entering the 'school of Jesus.' Though he is unseen yet we can enter into experience with Him of suffering, and understand Him better than in the days of the flesh.

"These things are not understood by the prudent and the wary, but by simple childlike faith. This generation is one of pleasure seeking and pessimism. It is therefore troubled. We ought to sit at the feet of Jesus and discover how human He is. For He assures us He is gentle and lowly. You may talk with Him about your problems.

"There are very many who do not understand that He has power in the world of today—chaotic and distressed and groping—and they feel that God is dead and that His plans all are awry. Human reasoning does not fathom the mystery and the only recourse is in coming back to the Teacher.

"'He that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them shall be like a man who built his house on a rock.' The trouble is that we do not know what He has said, and even when we do, we refuse to do what He has said."

Chevy Chase Church.

The true Christian must not only hear the word of Christ, but also must believe that God so loved the world that He gave his Son, the Rev. J. B. Bittinger, jr., of Amory, Miss., declared in a sermon yesterday morning at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

"The Christian is the one who hears the great doctrines proclaimed by the Galilean. Christ came into the world to proclaim a message, and His message gave meaning to his life. Men must hear His message of God's love and mercy before they understand the full meaning of His life. This hearing must produce right living and right thinking.

"The second characteristic of a Christian is that he "must believe on Him that sent Me." Hearing comes first—then belief of faith. To be a Christian one must not only hear, but must believe that God so loved the world that He gave His Son—that men might have life.

"There is no such thing as spiritual death. This is the security of the child of God. His life is hid with Christ in God—and he is kept, not by his own power, but by the power of God unto salvation."

Hoover Makes Away With Coat, but It's His

Chicago, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Herbert Hoover was under unjust suspicion for a few moments today of having made away with a fellow traveler's topcoat.

As the former President stepped from a train a husky Westerner, wearing a broad-brimmed hat, came up and bent over the gray topcoat Hoover carried.

He scrutinized the label and collar.

"Nope, reckon it ain't my coat," he said, and walked away.

Southern Team Leads by 2,530 In Bridge Play

Two New York Teams Hold Close Score in Other Semifinal.

By the Associated Press.

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 11.—With 28 boards to be played, Mrs. Humphrey Wagar and Henry Channin, of Atlanta, Ga.; Fred Levy, Montgomery, Ala., and Helen Bonwit, of New York, led 2,530 points in their semifinal match tonight for the team-of-four championship of the American Bridge League.

Mrs. Wagar's four established their lead in 32 boards of play against Charles Lochridge, John Rau, Huber Boscowitz and A. Mitchell Barnes.

Two New York teams played in the other semifinal match. Theodore Lightner, Louis H. Watson, M. D. Maier, Edward Hymes, jr. and Samuel Fry, jr., held a 280-point margin over Waldemar von Zedtwitz, Sherman Stearns, Walter Malowan and Sidney Rusinow on the first 16 boards.

The Southerners gained the semifinal round by a victory over Dr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Lord and H. B. Karp, of Baltimore, and Thomas W. Wickersham and J. C. Kunkel, of Harrisburg, Pa., by 2,160 points.

Burned Collective Farms as 'Revenge,' Officials Say.

By the Associated Press.

Leningrad, Aug. 11.—A woman and three men, allegedly former members of the Kulak class, were sentenced to death today for setting fire to a collective farm in the village of Msta, Novgorod Province.

Authorities said the act was one of vengeance because property of the four had been confiscated by the state.

Those sentenced were Ivan and Andreyev Ivgrafov, brothers; P. Ionian and M. Laskina, the latter a wife of a former Kulak who now is serving a prison term.

3 U.S. Branches Of Methodism Move for Union

Parley This Week Likely to Reach Terms After 17-Year Efforts.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 11. — Seventeen years of work by a small handful of men may culminate this week in the unification of more than 8,000,000 people into one denomination of American Methodism.

Representatives of the three branches of Methodism will assemble Tuesday in suburban Evanston for a three-day conference in which it appears, so state those close to the negotiations, that a plan acceptable to all three groups may be ratified.

Even ratification of such a plan by delegates from the Methodist Episcopal Church (Northern), the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and the Methodist Protestant Church would not necessarily mean amalgamation of the three units until perhaps 1944.

That date would mark the centennial of the schism of the North and South branches of the church, occasioned in 1844 over the question of slavery. The Methodist Protestant Church seceded from the mother church in 1828 over the question of lay representation.

It was in Evanston 17 years ago that the first step toward the restoration of the Methodist Church to a single unit were taken.

Dean James A. James, one of the members of that first conference and currently a member of the commission as representative of the Methodist Episcopal Church (Northern) told today of the origins of attempts at denominational unity.

"John R. Lindgren, a prominent Chicagoan," he related, "had established a $25,000 foundation at Northwestern University, the income of which, according to his own phrasing, "was to be devoted toward the promotion of "international peace and interdenominational comity.' There was little of international peace in those days.

"Knowing of the unorganized attempts springing from the separate branches of Methodism for unity, the administrators of the fund determined that the restoration of a single Methodist church would fit the terms of interdenominational comity. Consequently, a commission met in 1918."

Dean James explained that through the years great strides have been made in the settlement of questions pertinent to the unification. There have been matters of property and estates, he pointed out, as well as the perplexity of church organization and representation.

3 Legion Men Die, 16 Hurt in Crash

Convention Bus Collides Head-on With Truck.

By the Associated Press.

Wallingford, Conn., Aug. 11.—Three members of the Oscar H. Cowan American Legion Post of Stamford were killed and 16 others were injured early today when the bus in which they were returning from the State legion convention at Hartford collided head-on with a truck at the foot of a hill here.

The dead: William Gaffney, Stamford; John J. Cunneen, Milford; Edward W. Cash, Stamford.

At the Meriden Hospital it was said that of the 16 injured, only Edward W. Cash, of Stamford, was dangerously hurt. His skull was fractured and he was injured internally.

The police said that after the accident a car owned by Sheriff David Golden, of Bridgeport smashed into the wreckage, and that Mrs. Golden, who was driving, and her husband were treated for lacerations.

Witnesses said the bus contained 24 or 25 passengers. Several hours after the accident a list of the injured was incomplete.

Troops Thwart Crowd Seeking Jailed Negroes

Guardsmen at Abbeville, Balk Mob After 11 Held in Assault Case.

By the Associated Press.

Abbeville, S. C., Aug. 11.—National Guard troops with burnished bayonets tonight guarded from threatened violence 11 Negroes imprisoned here on charges of assaulting and attempting to kill Jim Strickland, 40, a white man, of Calhoun Falls.

Strickland, badly beaten early in the week, was expected to recover.

Learning of the approach early today of a "crowd of men between 200 and 300" with the expressed determination of storming the jail, Sheriff F. B. McLane, of Abbeville County, called upon Gov. Olin D. Johnson at Columbia for a company of National Guard troops. It was mustered quickly from Abbeville under Capt. A. B. Godfrey.

About 1:30 a. m., McLane said, within an hour after the troops had thrown a cordon of steel around the jail, a group of "between 50 and 100 men" swiftly rolled up in three trucks and demanded the Negroes. Upon seeing the soldiers, however, he said the men, whom he could not recognize "because of the darkness," "listened to reasoning" and quietly departed with the threat they would return with augmented forces.

Despite this threat, however, the sheriff said he did not expect further trouble. He did not plan to remove the Negroes elsewhere for safe-keeping.

The Negroes are expected to be tried the first week of September.

They were jailed Friday, three days after Strickland had been found, badly beaten, near a highway not far from a Negro church.

Strickland, who was discovered by a passing motorist shortly after 3 a. m. Tuesday, said many Negroes had made an unprovoked attack on him Monday night on the church grounds, knocking him unconscious with sticks and stones and leaving him "for dead."

Minister Charges Promises to Dry States Broken.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 11 (A.P.).—Dr. John R. Golden, militant Kansas prohibitionist, denounced the Roosevelt Administration tonight for "breaking its promise" to protect dry States from the "liquor traffic."

The Topeka minister and chairman of the Kansas Prohibition Emergency committee also charged that the Administration has shown by its own reports that it considers the National prohibition repeal amendment "a scrap of paper."

A Federal Treasury report issued Friday reveals "the startling fact," the dry leader declared, that 7,792 Federal permits to sell liquor were issued Kansans during the fiscal year which closed June 30.

gan, another in the "possibility" group, said:

"Pursuant to my usual custom, I will not comment."

Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, a New Deal supporter, refused any statement, but Norris (Republican), Nebraska, bluntly disagreed with Hoover.

"I don't know why we should demand that the President set forth his proposals for changing the Constitution before Congress adjourns," Norris said. "We may find out later that some changes are necessary.

"If we can't pass laws under the Constitution to relieve this depression, we ought to change the Constitution so that we can. Some Supreme Court decisions that are handed down after Congress adjourns may show what is needed in this regard."

Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas, agreed with Hoover that "it would be interesting to know what Mr. Roosevelt has in mind in the way of a constitutional amendment; he's been rather indefinite about it."

The Kansas veteran said he could think of only one "amendment that's needed—to prevent the issuance of tax-exempt securities.

"Too many of the wealthy are placing their investments in these securities, and there should be some check," he said.

Capper added that the Chicago statement "shows Mr. Hoover is taking a keen interest in political affairs and intends to be in the political picture," but contended it did not definitely stamp the former President as a candidate in 1936.

"While I can agree with him quite heartily on many of the things he says in his statement," Nye told newsmen, "Mr. Hoover and his friends ought to be assured that however displeased many people may be at this time with the New Deal, they are not ready by any manner of means to go back to the old deal of the Hoover days."

Coal Bill Cited.

Referring to Hoover's reference to Mr. Roosevelt's letter to the House Ways and Means Committee asking passage of the Guffey coal stabilization bill regardless of "reasonable doubts" as to its unconstitutionality, Representative Vinson, a member of that group said:

"In reference to the coal stabilization bill, many of us hold the opinion that the Supreme Court will reassert that Congress has power 'not only to regulate transactions which are part of interstate commerce, but to protect that commerce from injury.' That quotation, of course, is from the Schechter-NRA case itself.

"In my opinion no new principle of law was enunciated in the Schechter case and no new principle of law is relied upon to support the Guffey bill."

Reasoning "Correct."

But Snell said Hoover's reasoning some constitutional changes are proposed "is correct."

"The Guffey bill is one indication and the President wants to jam that through to see how he will have to change the Constitution to federalize all business," Snell said.

"Now is the time to bring his plans into the open so the people can be thinking and talking about them before January 3."

Although asserting he did not believe yesterday's statement threw any new light on Hoover's political intentions, Senator Gibson (Republican), Vermont, added:

"I haven't any doubt that he will be a candidate, and that today's statement is a preliminary outline of his platform."

Gibson would not comment on the statement itself.

figures, with the exception of the electric light and power and manufactured gas industries, and each type of income payment, except interest, shared in the 1934 rise. Generally, the 1934 gains were largest in those industries and types of income payments which had recorded the largest relative declines during the depression.

One of the largest factors in the growth of income was work relief payments, which increased from $637,000,000 in 1933 to $1,394,000,000 last year. Payrolls on Public Works Administration projects totaled $33,000,000 in 1933, and $302,000,000 in 1934.

Still Not Up to 1929.

Income in 1934, however, did not approach that of 1929, when the total was estimated at $78,576,000,000. Labor income in 1934 was estimated at $33,109,000,000, as compared with $29,121,000,000 in 1933 and $51,088,000,000 in 1929.

The department also announced that there was a marked decline in both 1933 and 1934 in business losses, which in 1929 were estimated at $10,000,000,000.

Real income did not vary to the extent of the dollar decline, the department said, since prices were an important factor. While income paid out declined 43 per cent from 1929 to 1933, the Bureau of Labor Statistics' indexes of the cost of living and of wholesale prices declined 23 per cent and 31 per cent, respectively.

"The less rapid decline in property incomes from 1929 to 1933, as compared with labor incomes, was due largely to the fixed nature of interest charges which did not fall below the 1929 level until 1932 and which, in 1933, were only 11 per cent below the 1929 total," the department said. "Dividends, on the other hand, decreased substantially after 1930, declining to 34 per cent of the 1929 level in 1933.

Interest Still Declines.

"Interest payments declined 1 per cent in 1934, while dividends increased 13 per cent. Wages, which had declined more than salaries in those industries in which wages and salaries could be segregated, increased 24 per cent in 1934, whereas, salary payments rose only 7 per cent. The net decline in dividends from 1929 to 1934 of 61 per cent was considerably greater than the drop in wages over the same period."

Agricultural income last year was given as 53.6 per cent of 1929; mining, 48.5 per cent; electric light and power and gas, 87.7 per cent; manufacturing, 55.5 per cent; construction, 26.7 per cent; transportation, 60.6 per cent; communication, 82 per cent; trade, 63 per cent; finance, 49.1 per cent; paid out by the Government, 123.4 per cent; service, 64 per cent, and miscellaneous, 62.7 per cent.

(In millions of dollars.)

	1929	1933	1934
Salaries and wages	51,088	29,121	33,109
Entrepreneurial withdrawals	12,424	7,365	8,103
Dividends	5,983	2,042	2,307
Interest	5,104	4,569	4,509
Rents and royalties	3,432	950	1,085
Other income	665	384	327
Total national income	78,576	44,431	49,440

Salary and wage earners, whose income the Federal Government has sought to boost to increase purchasing power, were shown to have received 67 per cent of the national income in 1934, compared with 63.9 per cent in 1932, and 65 per cent in 1929. Work relief wages accounted for 2.8 per cent of the income in 1934.

Dividend payments accounted for 4.7 per cent of the national income in 1934, compared with 7.6 per cent in 1929; interest, 9.1 per cent, compared with 6.5 per cent and entrepreneurial withdrawals, 16.4 per cent, compared with 15.8 per cent. This last classification represents the profit to those who assume the risk of business enterprise.

Customs Receipts Up.

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury Department today reported an increase of $32,107,280 in customs receipts for the financial year of 1935, which ended June 30, as compared with the fiscal year of 1934.

Receipts for 1935 were given at $346,997,094 and for the previous year, $314,889,814.

Cardenas Plot To Bring Swift Trial for Seven

5 Would-Be Assassins Held in Mexico City, 2 in Patzcuaro.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, Aug. 11.—Authorities planned swift prosecution today of seven men seized for an alleged attempt to assassinate President Lazaro Cardenas.

While official circles maintained a strict silence, it was learned that five men were under arrest here and two in Patzcuaro in connection with the asserted plot against the 40-year-old Cardenas, Mexico's youngest President.

It was understood the prisoners would be consigned for trial tomorrow.

Few details came to light beyond the report that one of those arrested is a native of Cardena's home town.

It is also understood that Col. Sanchez Anaya, chief of the security commission, followed this man to Uruapan from Mexico City and arrested him and the others before they had an opportunity to approach the President.

Old Enemy Is Held.

In high military circles, it was reported, that Reuben Gomez Prado, reputedly an old enemy of Cardenas from Jiquilpan, Michoacan, had told police: "They sent me here to kill Cardenas."

He was said to have been carrying a pistol and 11 cartridges when arrested. Authorities expressed belief he was mentally unbalanced. Names of his alleged confederates were not learned.

The President remained in the western state of Michoacan but is expected to return this week.

In the troubled state of Tabasco laws forbidding crosses in cemeteries, the wearing of mourning veils, jazz music and dancing were lifted today following the departure into exile of fiery Tomas Garrido y Canabal, deposed as radical dictator after a a reign of 15 years.

Garrido, his family and federal officials left Villa Hermosa yesterday in the planes bound for Guatemala. He said he would return within six months. In reliable quarters, however, doubt was expressed that Garrido would seek to rebuild his political organization.

Portes Gil Sees Peace.

Emilio Portes Gil, president of the National Revolutionary Party, issued a statement in the capital in which he commented on foreign press articles concerning the departure from the political scene of former President Plutarco Elias Calles, long-time "strong man" of Mexico, and declared "the day of 'strong men' in Mexico is ended forever."

"When Calles separated from the revolutionary regime," Portes Gil said, "many here and abroad predicted Mexico was headed for disaster and anarchy. But what has happened? Absolutely nothing."

He said events have proved Mexico "has attained its majority, and that the only force existing to govern the country is the force of law and of institutions." His statement denied that the National Revolutionary Party "is linked with capitalistic interests," and concluded "the revolution continues its march."

Managua, Nicaragua, Aug. 11.—Tomas Garrido y Canabal, for 15 years dictator of the Mexican State of Tabasco, and his party, arrived here this afternoon in two airplanes, en route to San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Report on Textiles Held Suppressed

Baylies Charges Inquiry Shows Tax's Ravages.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 11.—Lincoln Baylies, chairman of the committee on observance of the Northern cotton mills, tonight charged that the national Administration had suppressed a report on an investigation of the cotton textile industry to await adjournment of Congress.

Baylies said the investigation was made four months ago by a special Cabinet committee appointed by President Roosevelt. The committee, he said, was to investigate complaints that the cotton processing tax was slowly wrecking the New England cotton textile industry and that free importation of Japanese cotton goods was dragging the price structure down to a point where mills could not compete.

Baylies called upon the national Administration to release the report before Congress adjourned.

Galli-Curci Must Learn to Sing Again as Result of Operation

Success for Star Seen by Surgeon Who Removed Goiter.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—Amelita Galli-Curci, internationally famous prima donna, must learn to sing all over again.

For 15 years—through the zenith of her brilliant opera career—the diva gave the world sweet music from a throat half blocked by goiter.

By sheer will power she forced her beautiful notes on a devious detour through her windpipe.

Today, the tumor—"potatoe," she called it—was gone. Her throat was cleared of its old problem and filled with a new.

The successful operation that removed the 6¼-ounce obstruction Saturday doubled the amount of air her trachea can hold. She now must accustom herself to control the increased volume so she can produce the same clear tones.

Lessons Begin Today.

Her surgeon, Dr. Arnold Kegel, said "no complications have developed."

Single notes and simple scales will adjust the disturbed throat muscles before more difficult exercises begin. That will be after all danger of lesions has been passed.

The opera star may find aid in her efforts from sketches made by an anatomical artist who sat beside her while the goiter was cut out.

Galli-Curci will remain in the hospital a week or 10 days. Then she will leave for Los Angeles, accompanied by her surgeon.

Climatic conditions will be better there, he explained.

To Sing in Eight Months.

It will be at least six or eight months before the diva could sing in an opera house, Kegel declared.

And it is a possibility yet that her golden voice will never trill again.

"It is still impossible to predict the final outcome," the surgeon said, "but we are growing more optimistic hourly."

Dr. Kegel said he banked heavily on the artist's grit to aid her voice come-back.

"Anyone who knows Galli-Curci's will power," he said, "will agree that whatever Galli-Curci wants to accomplish, she will accomplish."

If she achieves her goal, her case will be unique in medical annals.

Charred Bodies Removed From Minnesota Wreck.

By the United Press.

Worthington, Minn., Aug. 11.—Four charred bodies were removed from the wreckage of a Ryan brougham plane which crashed and exploded in a corn field 4 miles northeast of here today.

Pete Lafrenz, 35, Fergus Falls, pilot, was identified as one of the dead. Ernest Boots, 50, farmer of Rushmore, Minn., also was identified. A third body tentatively was identified as that of Glenn Rue, 21, of Kenneth, Minn.

The fourth body, also a man's, had not been identified.

Five thousand persons at the annual air fair here saw the plane crash after part of the fabric on the right wing appeared to rip away. The pilot turned his plane into the wind and began to glide in for a landing. When about 200 feet off the ground, the ship suddenly crashed. It exploded immediately and burst into flames.

A coroner's investigation will be held.

Maria Jeritza Weds Sheehan In West Today

Opera Star to Be Bride of Film Executive in Surprise Rites.

By the United Press.

Santa Barbara, Calif., Aug. 11. Beautiful Maria Jeritza, for 10 years dramatic diva at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, and Winfield Sheehan, film executive, will be married in a quiet ceremony tomorrow at the historic mission at Santa Barbara.

Only a few friends will attend the ceremony, with Edmund Burke, film writer, as best man and Minna Gombell, actress, as bridesmaid.

They will go to the Sheehan ranch near here, where the singer was expected tonight. The couple obtained a license to wed Saturday afternoon after regular closing time of the marriage license bureau.

Divorced in Vienna.

Romantic rumors involved the pair for several months, since the Metropolitan singer arrived in Hollywood in April for screen tests. Miss Jeritza was divorced six weeks ago in Vienna from Baron Leopold Popper de Podharagn, known in this country as Baron von Popper.

They had been estranged for two years but the divorce was not known widely, and announcement Sheehan and Miss Jeritza had taken a license to wed was received with considerable surprise.

After a brief stay at the Sheehan ranch in Hidden Valley they will leave for New York, probably Wednesday, and sail August 21 for London, where Sheehan will consult with Dr. A. H. Giannini, financier, on plans for future production.

Resigned From Fox.

Sheehan resigned as vice president and production chief of Fox Studios following merger with Twentieth Century, and reportedly may align himself with Paramount under a new regime headed by John E. Otterson.

Jeritza's debut at the Metropolitan followed retirement of Geraldine Farrar, for years reigning queen of the opera. The Viennese singer rose to swift popularity and three years ago left the Metropolitan. It is rumored she will make a picture under Sheehan's supervision.

Law Frowns on Doctor's Test Of Freezing Writer to Death

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Aug. 11.—Stephen Simkhovitch, robust film writer, who has agreed to be frozen solid as subject of a "human icicle" revivification experiment, began dieting today to prepare himself for the test.

He ate soup and drank liquids, while Dr. Ralph S. Willard, research chemist, furthered plans to put him to sleep and then freeze him and keep him at a temperature of 30 degrees below zero.

Dr. Willard said he hoped eventually to show that the "freezing death" would overcome tuberculosis and even cancer.

From District Attorney Buron Fitts came a statement that "immediate steps will be taken to prevent such an experiment, if it is attempted."

Dr. George Parrish, city health officer, said he was sure the law would not permit Dr. Willard to "carry his human guinea pig idea any further than the exploitation stage." Dr. C. C. Warn, city humane officer, was considering action against Dr. Willard because of one monkey he said he had frozen and revived, a second which died permanently and a third which was still in "storage."

"If I can not perform my work in America unhindered," countered the Russian-born chemist, "I shall carry my equipment and experience to Mexico or to Europe. In all events, I mean to prove to the world that this is not fantastic—but that it is the logical, future method of combatting disease."

Simkhovitch, 34, summed up his views in this way:

"I'll at least have contributed something to the sum of human knowledge—if I don't come back.

"If I do, I'll be the first to travel to the next world and recross the line."

Father Is Willing.

By the Associated Press.

Robbinston, Me., Aug. 11.—Parental approval of the proposed refrigeration of Stephen K. Simkhovitch was given today by Simkhovitch's father, Dr. Vladimir G. Simkhovitch, professor of economic history at Columbia University, at his summer home here.

Dr. Simkhovitch, who pointed out that his son was 30 years old and privileged to do what he wished, said his only opposition to the experiment was in its becoming a "stunt."

He said that in view of the experiment's possible benefits to humanity it was an "entirely different proposition."

He doubted whether Catlifornia health officers would permit his son to become a "human icicle," but said if the health authorities did allow the experiment they probably were convinced as to its merits.

Dr. Simkhovitch added that the views of his wife, Mrs. Mary K. Simkhovitch, president of the national public housing conference and director of Greenwich house in New York, were "practically the same" as his.

Stories About Pictures You're Seeing.

Hollywood, Aug. 11.

"CHINA SEAS." This is Irving Thalberg's first production of the season and it cost over $1,000,000 to produce due to the length of time it was labelled "In Preparation." If the number of scenarios prepared on it were stacked up they would provide a fine high hurdle in a steeplechase race. The two authors who finally "licked it," as they say, were James K. McGuinness and Jules Furthmann.

The flicker was directed by Tay Garnett, who also wrote a scenario on it which wasn't used but did contribute some of the dialogue. Garnett likes to write and is the author of a novel. The all-star cast, Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Wallace Beery was installed to insure the picture's success at the box office. This trio could appear togother in a newsreel and draw feature attention at the box office. Their salaries helped the cost of the flicker mount.

Gable demonstrated on the set that he is a good trouper and that he might make a good director, which is one of his inclinations. He gave many helpful suggestions, didn't try to hog scenes, and often said to Director Garnett: "This is really Jean's scene, so let's play it a little more to her."

Miss Harlow behaved as usual on the set: Eager to learn, not stubborn in taking directions and interesting to watch. Often she could be seen riding from the sound stage to her dressing room with William Powell in his car.

WALLACE BEERY had fun working in this flicker, although, as usual, he seldom appeared on the set knowing his lines perfectly. Beery took his daughter, Carol Ann, on the set to watch him work and tried to amuse her. He would place her in the sound booth and speak to her, or would make queer noises, trying to make her laugh. Director Garnett had a "running gag" throughout the flicker with a child. Carol Ann wanted to be a movie actress, and, of course, she got the job. But Carol Ann is not in the released version of "China Seas." Her role was eliminated after the preview, for the running gag didn't come up to expectations.

A large boat and the Chinese water front were built on a large outdoor set at Metro. Then sections of this boat were built on a sound stage and placed on a roller, controlled by machinery, which rocked back and forth when the signal was given. Ten spillways with water were especially constructed next to these sections of the boat, and when they were lifted there was a downpour of water, fierce and strong—thus some of the close-ups of the storm.

FASTER SERVICE

Ten years ago, your operator needed an average of 7.3 minutes to put through a Long Distance call.

Today, the average waiting time is only 1.5 minutes. Nine out of every ten Long Distance calls are completed while you hold the line.

MORE DEPENDABLE SERVICE

Service was more subject to interruption by wind, sleet and other elements, a decade ago.

Service interruptions from natural causes have been greatly reduced by the substitution of cable for aerial wire. In 1935, the Bell System has 12,500,000 miles of Long Distance lines in practically storm-proof cable.

MORE TELEPHONES WITHIN REACH

In 1925 there were 11,500,000 Bell telephones and 5,800,000 other telephones in the United States, Canada and Cuba to which you could talk.

Now there are 13,500,000 Bell telephones and 17,300,000 other telephones in all parts of the world to which you can talk. By land lines or Bell System overseas service, 93% of the world's telephones have been brought within reach.

RATES REDUCED

A three-minute, station-to-station daytime conversation between Washington and Chicago in 1925 cost $3.85. The Washington to Cleveland rate was $2.00; Washington to San Francisco $15.60.

In 1935, the same calls cost: $2.55 instead of $3.85; $1.45 instead of $2.00; $8.50 instead of $15.60. After 7 p.m. the rates are still lower, in most cases as much as 40%.

Eliminating Germ No Guarantee Of Infection Cure, Scientist Says

Russian Holds Microbe Merely Starts Chain of Reactions; Pravda Lauds American Doctors' Attack on Dictatorship.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug. 11.—The belief that to cure disease the microbe must be found and eliminated was challenged by Prof. A. D. Speransky, of the Soviet Institute of Medicine, before the International Physiological Congress today.

The microbe sets up an initial irritation in the human organism and then often leaves its work to a chain of reactions in the nervous system, Prof. Speransky said.

Each link in the chain is determined by the preceding one, he asserted, and the microbe, after infection is started, may be wholly inoffensive.

Many of his experiments, he added, showed that although the microbe was satisfactorily eliminated, disease continued to spread.

Prof. Cperansky, whose views were made available to 1,500 delegates, pointed to his theory in explanation of what he described as frequently only a temporary beneficial effect of surgical operations in cases of gangrene and ulcer extremities.

The fundamental problem, he continued, is to find a means of creating certain regroupings of nerve combinations in the nervous system without causing a new source of irritations which, he maintained, might result from operations or introduction of vaccines into the blood.

Pravda Lauds Talk.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug. 11.—An American medical school professor's speech, attacking dictators and economic crises as "menaces to the advancement of science," made yesterday before the International Physiological Congress, was praised highly today by Pravda, official Soviet newspaper.

Pravda described the speech delivered by Dr. Walter Cannon, professor in the Harvard Medical School, to his colleagues, now in session at Leningrad, as a "remarkable speech by an eminent scientist" which attracted the attention of the Soviet public by its sincerity and vitality.

The newspaper particularly applauded Cannon's criticism of certain governments that neglected their scientists. With previous reference to Germany, Pravda added that some bourgeois countries force their scientists to abandon their true field of research in order to "measure their own skulls and noses" and to track down Aryan qualities in their birth certificates.

Seattle Burlesque Brings Envoy Here

Japanese Ambassador Will Investigate Hunt Party.

By the United Press.

Japanese Ambassador Hirosi Saito returned yesterday for a second time from his vacation in Connecticut to investigate an event regarded by Japanese as an affront to their Emperor.

The latest case concerned a burlesque of the Emperor pulling a jinricksha, staged by a Seattle club as part of a comic "Fox trot." A week ago Saito made representations to the State Department against a caricature of the Emperor in the magazine Vanity Fair.

The Ambassador today declined to comment on the Seattle incident or on whether he intended to discuss it with the State Department. Japanese Consul Issaki Okamato has already taken up the case with the Mayor of Seattle. This and other indications lead diplomatic authorities to believe the Japanese hoped to localize the incident.

England Seen Acting To Replace Old Ships

London, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Britain will replace all her obsolete warships within six years, the Sunday Chronicle reported today.

The newspaper's naval correspondent described a purported admiralty plan to increase cruiser strength to 60 per cent from the pravailing 50 per cent at an estimated cost of nearly $1,000,000,000.

The plan reportedly will be submitted soon to the cabinet, leaders of which have indicated approval.

Filene Reported Better; Danger Still Lingers

Moscow, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant and philanthropist, today made progress in his fight against lobar pneumonia.

"The patient passed a comfortable night. His condition is improved slightly," Dr. Fritz Meyer, famous German lung specialist, who flew to Moscow to treat Filene, announced. Meyer said his patient's condition still must be considered dangerous.

Parties Select Nominees Soon In Rockingham

County Is Evenly Divided, and Uses Conventions to Pick Candidates.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 11.—While the primaries this week decided Democratic nominees in most Virginia counties, the political campaign is just brewing in Rockingham County, where both Democrats and Republicans nominate by convention. This county is about evenly divided politically and neither party holds a primary.

Democrats will hold precinct meetings August 24, to name delegates to the county convention August 31. The magisterial district conventions will be held the previous day to nominate candidates for supervisor, justices of the peace and overseers of the poor.

The county convention will name candidates for the House of Delegates, clerk, treasurer, commissioner of revenue, sheriff and Commonwealth's attorney and select delegates to the district convention at which Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, of Front Royal, will be renominated.

Although they have not announced, County Clerk J. Robert Switzer, Sheriff Charles R. Fawley and Delegate J. Owen Beard will be nominated at the convention to succeed themselves. There is a four-cornered race for the treasurership, with Nat H. Keezell, son of the late Senator Keezell; J. T. Helbert, veteran member of the board of supervisors; N. D. Cool, of Bridgewater College, and C. H. Lambert, McGaheysville justice of the peace, seeking the nomination.

Walter Heatwole, of Dayton, and O. C. Wise, Edom, are seeking the nomination for commissioner of revenue.

The Republican convention will be held either the week preceding or following the Democratic gathering. Treasurer M. H. Harrison, sr., Commonwealth's Attorney D. Wampler Earman, and Commissioner of Revenue Charles S. Estep will be nominated along with Delegate John W. Morrison, former mayor of Harrisonburg. Friends say that J. A. Garber, former congressman and county treasurer, may be nominated for clerk. The name of Charles J. Dyche, the only Republican member of the board of supervisors, also is mentioned. An opponent for Sheriff Fawley has not been mentioned.

There are reports that Howard S. Zigler, former Republican member of the House of Delegates, and Don W. Thomas, Democratic city councilman, will be nominated by the respective conventions. Rockingham and Harrisonburg have two members in the House of Delegates.

Mr. Tugwell's Resettlement.

It was not the Tugwell of the gay days of 1933 who spoke last week in Ithaca. For instance, the Chautauqua County boy said to the assembled farmers of Tompkins County that he felt it would be very unwise for people to assume that a perfect or swift solution for their economic problems had been devised in Washington. There is, the Undersecretary went on, an abundance of good will in the country and an abundance of initiative, but more than these are needed to solve the depression. He was inclined to agree with the Englishman who remarked after a recent visit that the trouble with the New Dealers is that they think they can improvise administration.

People want to know where they are going and why they are going and that is only reasonable, Mr. Tugwell continued in a vein such as to have marked him as the compleat Tory in the first flush of New Deal dealing. And accordingly, he said, every step should receive full approval before being attempted. In soliciting this consent, he did not want his views indorsed just because he or his colleagues mean well or have their hearts where their heads should be. On the other hand, he pleaded with his audience not to disapprove his program on the ground that he or his assistants were "dangerous fellows."

Yesterday in Chicago there was announced an organization to be known as the Farmers Independence Council of America. Headed by a Kansas farmer and with cattlemen, Grange officers, farm managers and agriculturists from all parts of the country as directors, it is out to stem "the trend toward a dictatorship in agriculture." All that sensible farmers of this country want, according to the words of the new president, is a "damn good leaving alone." The policies of the AAA, he added, are forcing the farmer to sacrifice his self-respect and requiring him to run his business with "the constant unwanted aid of a Government wet nurse." And another charter member from Illinois put in that "the so-called New Deal has been a fertile breeding ground for parasites even amongst old honest farmers."

It's not very courageous, but it's certainly comprehensible for an improvised administrator to change his tune when the voice of the people begins to rise above the squeals of the butchered but not forgotten piglets.

Forgotten Issues.

The task confronting the conferees called upon to reconcile the conflicting provisions of the House and Senate versions of the holding company bills is more difficult than is generally realized. The futile struggle of the Administration to induce the House to acquiesce in the "death sentence" clause has diverted public attention from other differences in the two bills which deserve serious consideration because of the significant political and economic issues involved.

Among the most important of these major differences is that concerned with the extent of Federal control over local operating companies. Under the Senate bill the Federal Power Commission would be given control over operating utilities involved in interstate commerce or in any way connected with an interstate system. This control would be much more detailed and rigid than that now exercised by the I. C. C. over railroads. It would cover not only interstate transactions but methods of production and supply of power, operating practices, equipments, construction, etc. The Senate measure thus opens the door to encroachments upon the domain of State regulatory bodies and threatens to relegate them to a position of relative insignificance.

At the urging of State regulatory authorities, the House passed the Woodrum amendment specifically providing that an operating utility shall be exempt from Federal regulation or control as to any matters subject to the laws and regulations of the States and State commissions. By this means, the House bill would preserve State regulation in an industry which is still predominantly intrastate in character, while closing the gap in that regulation due to the absence of an effective system of Federal regulation over interstate activities.

It would be most unfortunate to leave room for a jurisdictional conflict between State and Federal regulatory authorities. In any such contest, the Federal Power Commission would doubtless gain the upper hand. It would certainly have a strong incentive to do so because of the privileged position which the Government is seeking to establish for its own power developments. Since only a few Senators are anxious to employ the holding company bill as an entering wedge for public ownership, the Senate conferees ought to adopt the House provisions relating to control over operating companies carrying the safeguarding Woodrum amendment.

Drop It.

Working at breakneck speed the Senate Finance Committee has within the space of a few days virtually rewritten the tax bill passed by the House. By eliminating the proposed inheritance taxes and lowering the exemptions for normal income taxes and surtaxes, the committee has unquestionably improved upon the work of the House. However, the new measure calls for an even higher scale of surtaxes than the House bill and would raise estate duties sharply as a partial offset to the dropped inheritance taxes. Then, too, although the rates imposed upon corporate excess profits would be modified, the tax itself is retained, although vicious in principle and extremely difficult to administer. The graduated tax on corporate net income is also permitted to remain.

Widening the income tax base is essential if we are to reach even a substantial fraction of the millions of heads of families and individuals now tax exempt. Their contributions are needed both for the sake of revenue and also to make the electorate tax-conscious and arouse imperative resistance to the debauchery of wasteful governmental expenditures. The La Follette amendment, lowering exemption limits to $2,000 for heads of families and $800 for single individuals is, therefore, a move in the right direction. But it has been introduced at the wrong time and place. A far-reaching reform of this sort should not be hurriedly attached as an amendment to a tax bill already through one house of the Legislature. It should be incorporated in a comprehensive tax program based upon intensive expert study of the budgetary needs of the Government, before either House or Senate is asked to pass upon it.

The Treasury is the proper agency to assume responsibility for outlining revenue measures and guiding legislators when tax proposals come up for consideration. On this occasion, however, it has ostentatiously refused to advise, approve or disapprove the changes embodied in the tax bills. House and Senate committees have been left to work out a plan with the aid of a few vague and thoroughly destructive suggestions from the President. The House bill has deviated somewhat from his recommendations and thus given the President an opportunity to disavow personal responsibility for the completed measure. Now the Senate Finance Committee has taken great liberties with the House draft of the bill. Before the measure is enacted, if it progresses to that point, it will be a composite production that no responsible individual or group will be able to indorse.

Under these circumstances, it has become essential that the House and Senate should agree to disagree, thus postponing action until the next session. They have done their duty by trying, of course fruitlessly, to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. Postponement is now the only chance for obtaining a well-rounded tax program, which will reach downward as well as upward, and produce needed revenues without destroying national income-producing capacity. The bills now under consideration are not only pitifully inadequate and unwise from a fiscal standpoint. They are even equally bad if viewed as "political gestures" designed to curry favor with voters.

Judging from editorial excerpts published today on the page opposite, the House tax bill is anathema to radical, liberal and conservative elements, no matter where they live, nor what their party affiliations. Since nobody likes the new tax program and since nobody is prepared to claim responsibility for its emergence, it is absurd to force it upon the country as though it were an emergency measure brooking no delay.

Figures Can Lie.

The total number of registered unemployed in Germany dropped from a record figure of over 6,000,000 at the beginning of 1933 to 1,754,000 by the end of last month. Moreover, according to computations of the National Industrial Conference Board, production in Germany has expanded faster during the past year than in any other leading industrial country with the exception of Italy. This dictatorship, by the way, is running Germany a close second in the race to eliminate unemployment. It is estimated that the number of Italian unemployed declined nearly 20 per cent during the past year, while production was increasing at an even more rapid rate.

However accurate these estimates may be, they are utterly misleading in so far as they tend to convey the impression that economic conditions in Germany and Italy are really improving. The governments of both countries are extraordinarily reluctant to disclose their budgetary secrets. However, there is no doubt that financing preparations for war and defense, and in the case of Germany, carrying out ambitious plans for drafting the idle into a labor army are a serious problem even for dictators. Obviously, unemployment declines whenever a country plunges ahead to provide work at any cost, withdraws men from productive industry to serve in the army and speeds up industries ministering to the forces of destruction.

So long as Hitler and Mussolini can, by hook or crook, find the means to pay for expenditures that they can not afford and so long as they can keep the civilian population docile, despite deprivation, a sham prosperity may be maintained. The test will not come until later, when the bill has to be paid. Employment and production indices have little constructive meaning when they are stepped up by defiance of economic laws. Those laws are slow but inexorable in their operation. They may be ignored for a time, but eventually they will prevail.

Interesting Record.

Into the hoppers of a Congress harried by many and intricate problems have gone this session 136 bills affecting the government of the District of Columbia. Of these, 31 have been passed by both the House and the Senate. Not the total, however, but the substance of the bills is important to Washingtonians. The year's record follows:

1. Use of parks for Shriners.
2. Use of parks for G. A. R.
3. Funds for Shriner convention.
4. Elks convention.
5. Settle estates of absentees.
6. Automobile liability.
7. Removal of dangerous buildings.
8. Condemnation of insanitary buildings.
9. Descent and distribution of estates.
10. Pipe line permit (Penn G. T. Co.).
11. Trinity College charter.
12. Residence requirements, firemen.
13. Residence requirements, policemen.
14. Pensions for blind (reconsidered).
15. License Dr. Gross.
16. Change Lefler place to Second place northwest.
17. Relief of Droop & Sons Co.
18. Abolish hidden bar requirement.
19. PWA loan for municipal buildings.
20. Smoke control.
21. Define negligent homicide.
22. Pipe line permit (Smoot).
23. New York avenue bridge (Penn. R. R.).
24. Amend divorce law.
25. Amend Union Station act.
26. Amend Borland act.
27. Exempt D. C. officials' bonds.
28. Change name of German Orphanage.
29. Remove substation (Penn. R. R.).
30. Pay military instructor.
31. Relief of Lyman C. Drake.

In addition, Congress conducted a comprehensive investigation of crime in Washington (later back-tracking on its most significant recommendations). It also agreed to allow the District a budget of $40,548,000 (the Commissioners having originally asked for $52,699,224) and included an item of some $59,000 in its second deficiency bill for the extension of local public health services.

The seventy-fourth Congress, of course, has not yet adjourned. But consideration of District affairs scheduled for today will be omitted and there will be little more attention given to further District legislation before adjournment. Local social security legislation, necessary to make the Federal act operative in the District, may be expected. The Senate has also promised immediate action on the bill extending the leave of Government workers already passed by the House, though, of course, this is not a District bill. It is possible, too, that some other relatively minor matters may be pushed through to enactment.

But, at best, it is a curious record. A community of over half a million persons in dire need of adequate school facilities, of a safe airport, of many municipal improvements, of such reforms as reasonable regulation of small loans, restatement of the powers of the Public Utilities Commission and a new parole system is tossed such legislative sops as authorizations for fraternal conventions and licenses for chiropractors.

One glance at the mouse-like list of District bills given birth at this session should be enough to impell every District resident to rush to the nearest citizens' association and enlist his support. A campaign is obviously in order to win some measure of self-government for the District. Even a modest delegation of powers to the Commissioners would permit an overtaxed Congress to center its energies on District problems of major importance. It is absurd that a national legislature without time to deliberate properly on the most vital issues of the day, should still be called upon to authorize a change of name for a local orphanage.

Bearded Justice.

It appears that some Missourians, like Macedonians of old, just "can't take it." Alexander the Great once decreed that his men shave off their beards so that they could not thus be seized by the enemy. A somewhat similar order has been issued by the police director of Kansas City. Because a certain policeman there could not resist knocking down everybody who made slurring remarks about his upper lip, henceforth no officer of the law in that city will be allowed to sprout a brush.

When news of the Kansas City policeman's plight spread to St. Louis, it caused much consternation. But the moustached chief of police soon allayed that, declaring he would as soon part with an arm as his hirsute adornment. His defense of an almost forgotten art comes none too soon. True, there are still some who cling to nature's facial embellishment. But there is no doubt that moustaches are fewer and that the cry of "Beaver" is seldom heard in the land. Even the artistic goatee is making its last stand. Waxed ends have replaced the droopy handle-bar shag, thus making moustache-cups as unfashionable as bead portieres and button boots.

De gustibus non disputandum est. Kings of Persia used to plait their beards with golden threads. Our forefathers tended theirs with orris root. Men of today who wear moustaches concentrate either on carefully twisted points or simple styles which fit snugly under the nose. And siding with the more lenient police chief of St. Louis, so long as the mode doesn't interfere with the catching of criminals, we see no reason why justice should not be tempered with moustaches.

Jascha Heifetz predicts that within a few years classical music will draw more people than football. That should be welcome news to raccoons.

Letters To The Editor.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

"Rainy Evening."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the newspaperman who wrote in your column "The Time, The Place, The Story" for Thursday, August 8: It really is fascinating. I wonder if you are the person who also wrote about the band Concert on the Potomac Basin, describing the hot night, sea of faces and the music. Perfect!

In your "Rainy Evening" you caught exactly my feeling on such an evening and expressed what I felt, "But more than all else, something to be grateful for." I believe I have always enjoyed the security and all the rest, but unconsciously have forgotten the gratefulness and the responsiblity I owe for it all.

Now is time, there must be space and it is the place for such a story. And you have expressed exactly the mood of the South, too, who have felt this blessedness. My hearty congratulations and please continue to write this column. This is from one who is entirely grown up, with a large perfect family, and a busy life.

CONSTANCE LYON.
Purcellville, Va., Aug. 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thanks for a lovely bit of writing, which somehow brought tears to my eyes. It made me homesick for the Valley (Virginia). Don't know why, I'm sure. Just read it on the Mount Pleasant car.

"True wit is nature to advantage dressed
What oft was thought but ne'er so well expressed."

CLAUDINE TUGMAN.
Washington, Aug. 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is a pity that the name of the writer does not appear with the beautiful article, "Rainy Evening," under the setting: "The Time, The Place, The Story," in this day's issue of The Post.

The appellation, "Sunset," was given to the American politician, Samuel Sullivan Cox, for his description of a sunset no finer than is the description of a "Rainy Evening" in this day's Post.

INNO McGILL.
Haymarket, Va., Aug. 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I say that I enjoyed "Rainy Evening" in today's paper very much. It is always one of the things I read first in the morning. You captured a mood that I had yesterday, and I know that there must have been thousands of others who felt that same nostalgia.

"A Reversion To Type."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your leading editorial on the significance of the Rhode Island election you describe the First District of that State as "heretofore consistently Democratic." This district elected a Republican Congressman in 1862, and between that time and 40 years later the Republican succession was unbroken with the exception of the Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses (1891-93-95) when a Democratic Representative was chosen. The Republican representation was resumed in 1895, and it was eight years before another Democrat went to Congress from the First District of Rhode Island, in 1903. The Democrats lost the district in 1908, but held it again from 1911 to 1919. Since that time no Democrat was elected from the First Rhode Island District until the Roosevelt landslide in 1932. So you see that since the Civil War period this district has had a Democratic Congressman during 18 years and a Republican during 52 years.

The question is significant only in the circumstance that instead of indicating an overturn in a consistently Democratic stronghold, it merely represents a reversion to type of a characteristic New England district.

Applauds 30-Day Leave.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many things have been said about the acts of the Congress, some of which may be justified, in the way of criticism, about the restoration of the 30 days annual leave to the employes of the Government, which was cut in the act for economy in 1932. Effort for economy along that line was unjust, absurd and ineffective, so that real economy, improved work, humane treatment will come from the action of the House, which will no doubt be followed up promptly by the Senate and signed of course by the President, who is composed of that humane spirit of justice to all.

The writer is not a Government employe, but has been, and knows whereof he speaks, that the method of leading instead of driving, is the only way to achieve success, in every class of business, and none more so, than those employed by Uncle Sam. Too close application to the desks retards the accomplishments sought, as vitality becomes exhausted, and energy lags, so accomplishments slacken.

Urges Modern Ships.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Who does not recall the campaign for funds to preserve the old frigate, the U. S. S. Constitution? Yet hardly would we think of sending that ship out to sea to do battle with the present armada of the world. The picture of any such fight is ridiculous past the point of laughter.

The old U. S. S. Constitution belongs in a museum, does it not, as far as it has any practical, present worth? And we preserve it, as we should, as an interesting memento of our past. Thus it has its value, to stimulate us perhaps to even better efforts, to remind us of our humble beginnings and our original thirst for liberty and independence.

And the U. S. S. Constitution was a most invaluable implement in securing our liberty and independence. But times have changed—need it be remarked—since then, and the liberty and independence of our country and its millions of people must be safeguarded with modern methods and equipment—else we perish.

The Fighting Transient Replies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please allow me space in your influential paper to reply to an article by Philip McCray entitled, "What Does It All Mean?" August 9, 1935. To Mr. McCray and all others who want to know, we mean just what we say.

In a previous issue of the "Fighting Transient" to which Mr. McCray made reference, we say in answer to his question, "You're right, the Government owes you something, and something a lot more than a dollar a week and a place to flop. (These are FERA transient "wages.") The Government, or society, owes its every citizen the right to a job at pay to maintain himself in decent health and living conditions. This relief is just a poor excuse. If it does not provide jobs or their equivalent, it does not deserve to be called a Government; our U. S. Constitution is supposed "to provide for the general welfare." Therefore, fellows, remember that the relief we are getting here is supposed to be adequate, and not a hand-out as some of the Salvation Army leaders would have you believe.

"This relief business started in 1932 under Herbert Hoover when hungry farmers from Arkansas took their shotguns and marched into the cities, raiding grocery stores and getting all the provisions they needed for a while. Hoover sent the Red Cross down to take care of the babies suffering from malnutrition, lack of food. From that day until this the Federal Government has had direct control of relief, the feeding of its destitute citizens, until it now has the huge machinery of FERA."

We have "gotten on relief," as Mr. McCray puts it, not because we like to sleep in condemned and lousy flophouses and exist on slop for the most part, but because it is our last resort. The biggest part of us are ex-service men and young men out of school and college. Many of us have been in the CCC. But we are tired of being segregated from society, shipped out to these labor colonies. Not because we hate labor as some would have you believe. Absolutely not. But because we want once again to resume our functions as normal American citizens. We want to have a home, get married possibly and raise a family. But these rights (life liberty and the pursuit of happiness) are denied to us.

What crime did we commit that we are sent out into the woods to plant acorns? What are we guilty of that we must spend the next years of our lives, the best years of our lives, isolated from the rest of the citizenry? Even now we are marked men. We ask Mr. McCray and his cohorts, "Why?"

Says Mr. McCray, "They feel that after they have been provided with work they still have the right to make the wage agreement." Absolutely yes, especially when that wage is even below a subsistence wage, which Mr. McCray admitted was the case in Washington at $45 a month. In other parts of the country, especially New York, relief workers are going to strike against a wage of $90 a month. But here other factors enter into consideration. But remember, Mr. McCray, no relief worker, or any other worker, ever got anything without fighting for it.

THE FIGHTING TRANSIENT.

The Post Impressionist

In Brightest Africa.

Postoffice, Monday.

"IT HAS been whispered"—thus we ourselves whispered nine days ago—"that M. Politis advised Ethiopia's early course in the Italian controversy. If so, the Italians will oppose him as a fifth member of the arbitration board."

And now: "Professor Manley O. Hudson is mentioned"—thus whisper the Associated Press dispatches from Geneva—"as a possible fifth member. His name was brought up when reliable quarters suggested that Italy might not accept M. Politis."

The Post-Impressionist disclaims all desire to be considered any sort of quarter, even a reliable one. He is a whole-hog-or-nothing man. But he does like an occasional chance to murmur "I told you so!"

* * *

Anyhow, if it isn't to be Nicolas Socrates Politis, of Athens and Paris, why shouldn't it be Manley Ottmer Hudson, of Missouri and Massachusetts?

* * *

Dr. Politis has one of the best legal minds among all the chronic delegates to the League of Nations; Dr. Hudson is one of the keenest international lawyers in the United States. But, even putting aside the rumor about Dr. Politis' advice to Ethiopia, he was undeniably born in Corfu and certainly spoke for Greece to the League council when, in 1923, Italian forces occupied that isle; he might be prejudiced. Whereas Dr. Hudson has long been a member of the history and law faculties of Harvard, where there are not any more Ethiopians than Italians, and was once associate professor of law at the University of Missouri, where there aren't many more Italians than Ethiopians; he ought to be neutral.

* * *

Dr. Hudson knows League procedure. Not only has he passed many a summer at Geneva as a representative of the American committee. In 1930 he was a technical adviser of the American delegation to the League's conference on the codification of international law, when David Hunter Miller led those intrepid adventurers.

Also, the anti-League press made a mighty hullabaloo over this. The doctor has always mightily advocated America's entry into the World Court—and, some five years ago, an energetic journal explained this by announcing that Hudson had at one time been on the League's pay roll. Some diligent reporter discovered (perhaps in "Who's Who in America," where the doctor had recorded it) that Manley O. Hudson—dear. Oh, dear!—served, back in 1919-23, as a member of the Secretariat's Legal Section. . .

* * *

Not least among Dr. Hudson's qualifications as an arbitrator is his dinner-giving talent. Every time he came to Geneva he would give a big dinner at the Restaurant des Eaux-Vives, in the park of that ilk. Even abstemious C. C. Morrison, of the Christian Century, and one of the launchers of the Kellogg pact, enjoyed those dinners.

Of course, he took no wine; he is a strict teetotaler. But, on one occasion, it wasn't the waiters' fault. Waiter No. 1 got Mr. Morrison's glass a third full before Mr. Morrison could stop him. A moment thereafter, Waiter No. 2 began, as he thought, to refill the two-thirds empty glass. And then the head-waiter, seeing the glass abrim and untouched, murmured to Mr. Morrison:

"If monsieur doesn't like this wine I have orders to serve any brand that any monsieur might prefer."

* * *

When Dr. Hudson first reached Geneva there arose a rumor that he was unapproachable. It was completely shattered by Homer Croy, irresistible author of a good many good books, one of which became Will Rogers' first talkie: "They Had to See Paris." What Homer wanted was to see Hudson.

"I knew him in Missouri," said Homer.

So we led him to the Secretariat, where he handed its most dignified guardian a tiny card: "Take that to the Doc and say I'd like an interview." The guardian returned with the card and said that Dr. Hudson was "too busy."

Then we saw the card. On it was printed: "Achile Dubois—Good Prices for Rags, Bones and Bottles."

Homer calmly added a line in pencil: "I've come to borrow money, not to buy your shirt." Said Homer: "Now Manley'll let me come up." And Manley did.

* * *

Doesn't all this indicate the perfect arbitrator? To be sure it does. Yet, there may be successfully advanced an objection against Dr. Hudson as odd-man on that Ethiopian-Italian Commission:

The party at present consists, you know, of two Italians and two Ethiopian appointees. One of the latter is Pitman Benjamin Potter, formerly professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin. The Post-Impressionist, as already hinted, is quite sure that Dr. Hudson would perform his arbitral role without prejudice. But, sentiment running the way it does in this country, Mussolini may not want two American professors on the board.

That might look—to him—like a New Deal for Ethiopia.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

On Butting In.

New York, Aug. 11.

THERE is no other nation on earth more given to the formation of leagues, societies, foundations and institutes than the United States. Yet in the entire roster of these American bunds it would be impossible to find one with the sole purpose of minding our own business and permitting other peoples to mind theirs. One the contrary, the other nations of the earth, no better than they should be, to be sure, must now regard this country as the great international scandal-monger, busybody and insufferable tattletale with a pestiferous curiosity and a sanctimonious delight in sins of the neighbors which could be duplicated or equaled within her own borders.

If all the solemn demands on Congress for resolutions or worse against various other countries were fully obeyed, the American Navy and Army would be constantly engaged in wars of liberation in all quarters of the world at once, saving the fact that we would have been ganged and given one hell of a good licking a long time ago. Ships and troops would have gone tearing off to the Near East every time some industrious Turk lost patience with a whining usurer of the Christian faith and liquidated his debt with a wagon tongue. Within the last two years we would have plunged into the sister republic of Mexico with a "Here, here, what's all this?" attitude. We would have come to grips with the British on half a dozen issues scattered all the way from India to Dublin and with Japan, Russia, Italy and Germany, always on the side of justice and humanity, no doubt, but always with some unfinished business of the same kind at home which deserves attention first.

• • • •

I WONDER if the societies which are always wanting the American Government to denounce another nation for some outrage against the members of some race or religion really intended that this country should go all the way down the line and see it through in each case. Because, after all, when one man steps into the affairs of another in the chivalrous role of protector of the weak and oppressed he should always be prepared and willing to go to the floor when the party of the second part demands: "What are you going to do about it?" Experience among individuals and nations alike has shown that little good is accomplished and the prestige of the gallant knight suffers considerable wear and tear if, upon being asked what he is going to do about it, he merely shrugs and says he doesn't think it a very nice way to act.

We might, for example, tell the Nazi government that it is a great barbarian and no gentleman, but that would hardly be worth while, because you can not impress one by calling names. A Nazi, similarly, if impressed at all, is complimented when informed that he is brutal, inhuman, stupid and altogether disagreeable, for that only makes him a good Nazi, which is what he aspires to be. So, by way of deserving the compliment, he calls his gang, walks into a Jewish notion store presided over by an old woman, kicks her in the stomach and reports to the neighborhood leader that he has done his good deed for that day.

YET for the atrocities which might be cited against the Nazi, the Nazis in retaliation, might be able to dig up chapter and verse on some exceedingly interesting butcheries performed on members of the American community by Americans with the approval of local public opinion and without stirring the forces of the law to action. There are more human beings reduced to the status of outcast in this country than in Germany, and the Jews, themselves, can hardly be oblivious of certain discriminations, social and otherwise, among their American neighbors. This prejudice, rather passive at the present time, contains the germ nevertheless of the ruthless persecution which has developed in Berlin and was rising toward the same cruel fury in this country only a few years ago when the village loafers and other riff-raff of the country banded together in a Nazi organization called the Ku Klux Klan, under religious leadership. They were especially strong in, of all places, home-spun wholesome, typically American Indiana.

It is doubtful that the Nazis in their concentration camps can have out-awfuled the atrocities which occurred in the turpentine camps of Florida and on the peon farms of Georgia a few years ago or the cases of the Negro prisoners in one or the other of the Carolinas last winter. The Negroes, it may be recalled, were locked up in a bare shack in cold weather, froze, lost their feet and were finally held to blame on the ground that they had wrapped their legs in spiral puttees which stopped their circulation.

There is much home-work to be done before the United States will be qualified to act as critic-in-chief of the world in general, but the mother-in-law instinct is strong and a country which has done none too good a job of raising her own brats can not refrain from her friendly duty of reporting the neighbors' kids for tincanning the dog or smoking cubebs out behind the barn.

Greenland Diary

By William Lyon Phelps

AMERICANS are justly proud of our Minister to Denmark, Mrs. Owen, daughter of William Jennings Bryan. She is greatly beloved by the people of that highly intelligent nation, as she is admired by the many thousands of Americans who have heard her on the platform.

Well, she has written a little book (Dodd, Mead, publishers) called "Leaves From a Greenland Diary," and the picturesque photograph of her facing the title page shows the most attractive Arctic costume I have ever seen. Personally, I do not care what women wear. It is none of my business, anyhow; let them wear what they like. But if they knew how much more attractive they look in furs than in pajamas or shorts, what would they do? They would continue to wear exactly what they choose.

• • • •

The Normandie is nearly 80,000 tons; Mrs. Owen sailed for Greenland on a ship of 1,400 tons. "We on the Disko are living intimately with the sea."

All she knew about Greenland before this voyage is all I knew before I read her book. Four words of the famous missionary hymn—"From Greenland's icy mountains." She says now that a green country is called Iceland and an ice country is called Greenland.

This book is filled with interesting information about a little-known country, and is copiously illustrated with photographs.

Who Favors The Tax Bill?

Survey Of National Editorials Reveals No Enthusiasm For New Levies.

Communists and Republicans Join Forces to Condemn Administration Plan.

The following symposium of editorial opinion cuts across party and sectional lines, including all shades of political attitudes, from the most radical to the most conservative.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch (Independent Democratic): "The bill as it stands is woefully inadequate. The revenue it is estimated to yield—some quarter of a billion dollars—with not pay the running expenses of the Government for two weeks. It is not equal to one-third of the annual interest on the public debt. The situation demands a measure that will not only increase taxes on the wealthy—as this one properly proposes to do—but will broaden the income tax base. That is what we have got to come to ultimately, and the reason we are not coming to it immediately is the discreditable one of partisan political expediency. • • • We object to the present form of the tax bill as inadequate; we object also to the casual way in which it seeks to inject an entirely new principle, that of a tax on corporate bigness as such, into our economic system."

Christian Science Monitor (Boston, politically independent, liberal toward social projects): "The final version of the House Ways and Means Committee's tax bill makes clear that it does not greatly matter what happens to this legislation. President Roosevelt's blunder in asking for the bill at this session spoiled any chance of giving needed care and study to the execution of the message which was in itself meritorious. • • • Whatever is done in this hurried atmosphere of a waning session ought to be only a prologue to necessarily more considered action another year."

Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer (owned by Josephus Daniels, American Ambassador to Mexico): "Steadily the poor have been soaked. Today no one asks for any 'soaking of the rich' though the rich and the fawning defenders of the rich talk much about such a soaking. All that is asked is that the rich in America assume their share of the costs of Government on the basis of ability to pay. They are not paying such a share now, but there will be no equity in taxation in America until they are required to do so."

Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal (owned by Robert W. Bingham, Democratic leader of Kentucky and American Ambassador to Great Britain): "The bill as reported by the committee should be pushed to a prompt passage, thus clearing the way for adjournment of Congress. The new question of taxation which it raises should be settled now, and not allowed to hang over to a new session to the disturbance of business. It is not, as some of its opponents claim, a 'share-the-wealth' scheme. It is a legitimate plan of taxation based upon the sound theory that taxes should bear most heavily on those most able to pay them. It is not a new untried plan, but has been in successful effect in Great Britain for several years."

Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier (Independent Democratic): "This 'soak-the-rich' program is a soak-the-brains program. It is aimed at energy, thrift, and the will to deny self and to achieve. The people in Washington who are bent on putting it through, with rare exceptions, were and are without capacity to earn their salaries in private life."

New Republic (left wing weekly): "At length, frustrated in so many directions, the President has tried to salvage his leadership by embracing the essentially conservative campaign against bigness, embodied for the moment in an insignificant tax measure that, while taking only a tiny step toward redistributing wealth, has aroused the fury of the rich. The whole conception behind it overlooks the fundamental fact that there is little point in trying to redistribute wealth as long as nothing is done to produce more than a fraction of the wealth we are equipped to create."

Scripps Howard newspapers (politically independent but warmly supporting the New Deal: "It having already been demonstrated that the tax schedules proposed by the House Ways and Means Committee will not raise enough money to make a dent in the national debt, let us now look at some of the political aspects of the situation. We see in them dangers which, we believe, more than amply support our contention that this measure, originally conceived in politics and still dominated by politics, should be junked forthwith • • • The proper tax measure required to meet the fiscal needs, should be such a tax as already has been proposed by the Ways and Means Committee, but with the middle and lower brackets added and with the job done all at once. Such a measure would be fair. It would raise revenue, which the Ways and Means bill alone does not do. But, we repeat, the whole job should be done at once. It having become obvious that such a bill as we have described is not forthcoming at this session it it better to discard the whole attempt and to wait until such a time as Congress is willing to face the task of bringing forth a bill that will not only tax the rich but will retain the principle of visibility and ability to pay in raising the money that is necessary to make this country solvent."

From the St. Louis Star Times.

Daily Worker (official organ of the Communist Party): "Future Marxist historians of the New Deal will be hard put to it to decide which of its frauds was the greatest. Undoubtedly ranking well up near the top of the list will be President Roosevelt's 'share-the-wealth program. • • • The Communist Party is in favor of new taxes on the rich, but real taxes, not the love-taps of the Roosevelt bill. And not, as proposed by Roosevelt, taxes to pay the national debt—which means paying the bankers, but taxes for social legislation in behalf of the masses. We demand steeply graduated taxes on all individuals and corporate incomes, inheritances and gifts of $5,000 and over."

Arkansas Democrat of Little Rock: "If it is the intention of Congress not to tax but to destroy the majority of our estates of more than a million dollars or so, the new bill seems to be what the doctor ordered."

Houston (Tex.) Chronicle and Herald (owned by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC): "The Chronicle must admit it has small favor for the tax bill now passed by the lower House of Congress. Each major part of it is open to objection. • • • We already have the highest estate taxes in the world. • • • The country needs more revenue. We should have soon an effective program of balancing the Federal budget, a thing which the present bill hardly begins to do. But that tax program should go directly to where the money is—in the incomes of all the people."

San Antonio (Tex.) Express (politically independent): "During recent weeks that (Finance) committee has been hearing from the country. It is more likely to heed what business leaders have told it than any word from the White House. Should the majority go all the way in complying with the popular will, it would pigeonhole the bill now. Such disposition of the measure would best serve the public interest."

The Nation (liberal weekly periodical): "The weaknesses of the bill are under attack from left and right in the Senate. Any detailed consideration of its provisions in the Nation must wait upon its final form. But even at this writing it is safe to say that the efforts of Senators La Follette and Costigan and and a few other intelligent critics on the left can hardly succeed in turning this feeble gesture into a strong bill for social taxation in the few remaining breathless weeks of the present session. Whatever its ultimate provisions the Administration's bill must remaint little more than a straw in the political wind—and a tribute to the demagogic potency of the dictator of Louisiana."

San Francisco Chronicle (Independent Republican): "The tax bill comes out of the House as a hybrid. It is neither the thing the President originally proposed nor the thing the House started out to create. It is a mixture of the two, a little piece of each, but neither one effectively. It is one thing or the other only just enough to be an aggravation."

Los Angeles Times (Republican): "Senator Vandenberg correctly designates this bill as a 'fake' both as a share-the-wealth and as a revenue measure. To be a real revenue measure its base would have to be broadened very materially.

The lower limit will have to reach much further down if enough revenue is to be obtained to make even a start toward balancing the budget. When that is done the pretense that it is a 'tax the rich' or 'share the wealth' bill will disappear completely. • • • Congress should adjourn and let the committee wrestle with tax questions until the next session."

Hartford (Conn.) Courant (Independent Republican): "The majority by which the tax bill was passed by the House of Representatives signifies little. For once the members of the House had an opportunity to vote for taxes that would directly affect only a small proportion of their constituents. They grasped it eagerly. The result was an overwhelming indorsement of a measure that few of the members understood, that many distrusted, but that virtually all agreed was politically smart."

New York Times (Independent Democratic): "The main thing to bear in mind is that an unlimited power of taxation may be so availed of as to become a power to destroy. If that is the ultimate purpose of a given proposal for new taxes, it ought to be frankly stated and fully understood. That is not done by the sponsors and framers of the so-called wealth taxes. • • • If the bill is for revenue, rewrite it so that it will produce revenue. If its purpose is to bring about a new social order let that be boldy acknowledged. As the affair stands today, we have the spectacle of members of Congress light-heartedly employing a power of taxation which they do not seem to know may prove to be a power to destroy."

Detroit Free Press (Independent): "Wealth should be properly taxed. It should not be allowed to evade doing its part toward governmental support by taking the form of untaxable bonds. Those possessing it should be obliged to exercise decent stewardship. But from the standpoint of the general advantage, destruction of private fortunes through confiscation, persecution or any other method, would be simple insanity, comparable to the decapitation of a golden-egg-laying bird. • • • The rich should be made to pay their full share, but they can't be taxed beyond their ability to pay, all of Mr. Roosevelt's wise-cracking to the contrary notwithstanding."

New York Daily News (Independent, but partial toward the New Deal): "As we've repeatedly said, we believe the spread-wealth philosophy behind the bill is right (but) it is hard not to feel some sympathy with Senator Vandenberg's partisan, but pithy remark that as a spread-wealth tax bill this one is a hoax. There is another piece of disagreeable but true taxation philosophy which isn't touched on in this bill. We mean the principle, proved sound through ages of taxation experiments, that the tax base should be as broad as possible."

Baltimore Sun (Independent Democratic): "It can hardly be denied that as it now stands the bill is nothing more than a punitive 'soak-the-rich' device which is doubtless intended, as Senator Barbour, of New Jersey, has suggested, to catch the votes of the less wealthy and the poor. • • • In view of the billions upon billions that the Administration has been spending, it seems little short of absurd to keep the country on edge and Congress in session through an entire summer for the sake of raising such a relatively picayunish sum on the pretense that it will help to balance the budget."

Philadelphia Inquirer (Republican): "When that atrocious tax bill with which the Senate Finance Committee is now wrestling in executive session got through the House its promoters estimated that it would produce $270,000,000 in revenue. Opinions differ widely as to that. • • • But there is no segregation. There is no debt paying. What is collected will go the way of other revenues. It will provide more money for miscellaneous spending."

About Europe

By Edward Acheson

ON THE plains of Hortobagy in central Hungary we asked one of the cowboys why he didn't use a girth on his saddle; just two stirrups hanging from a pad with nothing to keep the pad from slipping around. He thought about the matter for some time, and even went around on the other side of the horse for enlightenment. He didn't know, he said. Probably it would be a lot more convenient in mounting, but it simply hadn't occurred to anyone; Hungarian cattlemen had always ridden that way.

We of a more advanced civilization exchanged covert glances and returned to London where six new shirts awaited fresh from the maker. On each the fourth button from the top was missing. So was the button hole. We had discovered on current shirts that when the wearer assumed a sitting position, this omission produced a horizontal, gaping and draughty cave giving on the solar plexus. We telephoned the maker to inquire why this was done—or, rather, wasn't. He talked a good deal before saying he didn't know. Probably, he admitted, it would be a lot more convenient to have all the buttons but English shirts had never been made that way.

THE Germans are thorough if nothing. One of the more modern Munich hotels has four sets of bells in each room. The ones on the wall have "Waiter Maid, and Valet," each written in three languages. So has the set in the bathroom. But the ones beside the bed and on the writing table are a later addition. When these were installed some doubt must have arisen about the percentage of literacy among the Anglo-Saxons. For the French and Germans the words are written out. For the British and Americans they have pictures. But the final touch of efficiency is the sign engraved on the side of the bell casing. This says, in German only, that if none of the bells work, then recourse may be had to the wall telephone.

IF ENGLAND be practical and France logical, then Sweden is characterized by a sterling common sense. The liquor law in Stockholm prohibits the consumption of straight spirits except with meals, and then only two drinks per meal. It is a sound idea and works well in that country. But the dilemma of a foreign couple in need of a pint of brandy for a walking trip was not, apparently, envisaged by the law framers. However, the national characteristic, as personified by the waiter, solved the problem in a jiffy. Ten drinks to a pint; two drinks to a meal; two people. Hence, four drinks permitted per couple per meal. And the answer was obvious. Each ordered two and a half meals and put the brandy in the ruck sack.

AROUND the artificial surf pool in Budapest lurks a constant fear that someone will plunge in just where a wave isn't. To prevent this catastrophe there is a warning in seven languages, the English translation being: "To dive into the wavy water is prohibited and dangerous."

THE French Line, if you remember, was responsible for making America "soigne" conscious. It is still true to its sense of the fitness of things. The Champlain translates the warning. "Ne jamais mettre le gilet sans les bretelles" as "Never put on your life belt with suspenders hanging down."

The Once Over

Rhode Island.

Rhode Island is a small State situated in the middle of the political situation and entirely surrounded by raised eyebrows.

• • •

It is so little you are apt to overlook it on a map, but you can seldom miss it when counting election returns.

• • •

• • •

It is situated in a corner of New England and the corner appears to have been plentifully and quite abruptly equipped with "Stop" lights.

• • •

The other day a congressional district that went Democratic lock, stock and barrel in the last national election, went Republican lock, stock and wagonful-of-barrels. Not only did it elect a G. O. P. Congressman, but it rejected an $8,000,000,000 U. S. loan, which is one for Mr. Ripley.

• • •

But does it mean anything?

The G. O. P. viewpoint is that it (a) marks the beginning of a demand for less government by hocus-pocus; (b) that it is a plain demand for tighter corsets on the Broader Life; (c) that it is a distinct reflection of a "Who's gonna pay in the end?" attitude manifesting itself among American voters.

• • •

The Democrats hold (a) that the vote in one Rhode Island district is as meaningless in the national situation as a speech by a Singer Midget at a wrestlers' convention; (b) that it was just a little sniping affair in a Battle of the Marne; (c) that it must have been something those Rhode Island voters ate.

• • •

But there is one thing both sides have to admit: it is again possible for a Republican to run for office without a farewell letter in one hand and a complete apology for his rashness in the other.

• • •

President Roosevelt belittles the vote and asks, "Was there an election in Rhode Island?"—a question which may ultimately take rank with Bill Terry's famous, "Are the Dodgers still in the National League?"

• • •

Maybe Rhode Island has flashed the first warning that America prefers to depend on the old oaken bucket rather than pump priming for her cooling drinks. And maybe not.

• • •

But there she stands. And whatever the significance of her behavior she crowded Haile Selassie, the girl swimming champions, the Nazi riots and Dutch Schultz off the front pages for a day or two.

• • •

Speaking of Kingfishes.

Elmer Twitchell says it's still a question in his mind who got hit harder, Kingfish Levinsky in Illinois or Kingfish Farley in Rhode Island.

Plans to Fortify Posts in Pacific Studied by U.S.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Plans to strengthen United States fortifications in Hawaii and the Aleutian Islands after the Washington Arms Treaty expires next year already have been discussed by high Administration officials, but no definite policy has been agreed upon, it was reported reliably last night.

This Government, it was learned, still is hopeful that a new treaty may be negotiated before the Washington pact dies and will make unnecessary a costly building race in the Pacific.

Responsible authorities point out that the treaty still has a year to run and thus the problem is not yet urgent. As naval officials study the results of the recent fleet maneuvers in the Pacific, other authorities contemplate means of maintaining this country's supremacy in the Pacific.

Follows Stimson Policy.

One move in this direction already has been made. The Administration jammed through a reluctant House the Bland-Copeland merchant marine bill. The measure is designed to strengthen the United States Merchant Marine both in the interest of commerce and as an adjunct to the national defense. Many naval observers believe the American fleet would be seriously crippled in a war because of the weakness of its transport service.

The Bland-Copeland bill is now before the Senate, where it is conceded little chance of passage this session. New Dealers say, however, that it will be given a preferential place next session. If not acted on by the Senate this year, the House will have to pass it again.

Meantime, it became known that this Administration is virtually certain to follow a Pacific policy laid down by Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson under the Hoover regime—that fortification of the Nation's Pacific possessions and fleet limitations imposed by treaty are indissoluble.

Hull Is Silent.

No expression on this phase of the situation has come yet from Secretary of State Cordell Hull. He has persistently declined to be drawn into any discussion on the matter, in the face of reports from Tokyo that Japan would welcome a pact which would fix Pacific fortifications at the status quo without imposing fleet limitations.

These reports created considerable discussion in the capital in view of Japan's denunciation of the Washington Treaty and indications from abroad that Great Britain is not disposed to agree to future fleet limitations.

Hull and other Administration officials feel that this Nation will be free to expand its Pacific fortifications when the Washington Treaty expires. To this end the Navy Department is reported already to have surveyed the Aleutian Islands and Pearl Harbor, Territory of Hawaii.

The strict secrecy that shrouds all developments in this situation has extended to the department headed by Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson. His only observation thus far has been that the American fleet must be second to none and that the United States' position in the Pacific cannot be weakened. It is known, however, that he and his officers consider Pearl Harbor to be of strategic importance.

May Inspect Guam.

Congressional leaders, including Vice President John N. Garner, will be given a personal opportunity to study the problem this fall when they journey to Manila to attend the inauguration of Manuel Quezon as first president of the Philippine Commonwealth.

The guests will include Majority Leader Joe T. Robinson and Minority Leader Charles N. McNary, of the Senate; Speaker Joseph W. Byrns and Minority Leader Bertrand Snell, of the House; Chairman Key Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Chairman Samuel McReynolds, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee; Senator Ernest Gibson (Republican), Vermont, and other members of the territories committees of both houses.

The party will stop in Honolulu and in two Japanese cities.

Farley Lauds Isles.

By the United Press.

Honolulu, Aug. 11.—The Hawaiian Islands are "the equivalent of 1,000 war ships," Postmaster General James A. Farley—on vacation here—asserted in a speech marking the record flight of the Pan American clipper ship from California.

"Without you our country would require a greater navy than the world has ever known," Farley said. "You are not subject to the dread of some far-flung lands that because of your remoteness you may be neglected by the home government. These islands are too important to the United States for anything like that to happen.

"You are our sentry in the Western ocean; the outer guard of our national defense. You are the equivalent of 1,000 war ships. In fact, you are the keystone of our safety in this part of the world. I might say you are our first guarantee of peace, for any hostile attack on our Pacific Coast is impossible while the American flag floats over Pearl Harbor.

"That is why we have in these islands one of the greatest naval bases in the world.

"It is unique in that while it is a potential war asset, it threatens nobody; it implies no menace to any other country—but it is a very comforting thought that it is there."

Deal Is Hinted To Revive Farm Mortgage Act

3 Years for Composition of Indebtedness Would Be Granted.

By the Associated Press.

Capitol Hill sources yesterday hinted an agreement by Senate leaders to take up the Frazier amendments to the bankruptcy law to extend a three-year "lease of life" to mortgage-ridden farmers.

The bill—it is not the $3,000,000,000 inflationary Frazier-Lemke bill—seeks to meet the constitutional conflicts found in the old Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage act last spring by the Supreme Court.

That law gave courts authority to reduce interest on farm mortgages brought before them under the bankruptcy act and to scale down even the face of a debt in line with reappraised farm properties.

The Supreme Court held it took property without due process of law.

The newer version—which Administration leaders are reported to view with some favor—provides only one form of relief. It permits a debt-ridden farmer to bring his case before a court under the bankruptcy act and to have a three-year period in which to work out a settlement with his creditors.

The court is authorized to have the property appraised and to assist the farmer to compose his debts, by agreement with his creditors, to an amount which will match the reduced value of his holdings.

There is no compulsion on the creditors to accept the agreement. If, at the end of three years, they still insist on taking the farmer's property, they may do so under the sheriff's hammer.

During the three-year period, the farmer is required to pay rent on his place which is applied on taxes and interest.

Fire Volunteers Arrange Plans For Field Day

Arlington and Fairfax Events Will Be Staged in Virginia Highlands.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Plans are being completed for the annual field day exercises to be held by the Arlington-Fairfax Counties Volunteer Firemen's Associations on August 24, according to an announcement by the committee in charge.

Invitations have been extended to 75 fire companies, departments, rescue squads and their ladies auxiliaries to attend the event. It will be staged on the field at Twenty-third street and Arlington Ridge road in Virginia Highlands.

The committee in charge of arrangements consists of John R. Malloch, Ballston, chairman; Elmer J. Blackmer, jr., Arlington, secretary; Charles B. Austin, Clarendon; Edwin B. Chapman, Cherrydale; Joseph R. Royston, East Falls Church, and B. S. Kidwell, Jefferson. There will be a subcommittee consisting of the department presidents and chiefs in conducting the various contests.

The Jefferson Fire Department, under the direction of Chief B. S. Kidwell and Secretary Hugh A. Allen, jr., will act as host and serve as a committee on reception, luncheon, refreshments and grounds.

Correcting rumors current in the county that there are a number of cases of infantile paralysis developed in the last few days, Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, declared yesterday that the reports are absolutely without any foundation.

"There has been but one case in the county and that is well in hand," Dr. Chichester said.

While there have been no signs of any other cases in the county, Dr. Chichester still appeals to the citizens to use care.

Dr. Chichester asserted that the opening of the playgrounds in the county under supervision of the county school board has gone a long way to aid the situation in the county. He stated that there has not at any time been any thought of closing them and says that the children can find no better place to play than at the county playgrounds.

The summer dental clinic for school and pre-school children for the week will be as follows: Today for school and pre-school children; tomorrow for school children only; Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday for school and pre-school children.

The clinic will be held at the Clarendon Health Center from 9 a. m. to 3:30 p. m. and will be in charge of Dr. P. H. Pumphrey, county school dentist. The fee is 50 cents.

The Woman's Auxiliary to the Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department will meet Wednesday night at the home of Mrs. Lucie Kale, on North Hudson street, Clarendon.

The finals in the tennis tournament being sponsored by the Arlington County Playground Association will be played today on the courts at the Washington and Lee High School. The schedule of games follows:

At 9:30 a. m., Junior boys singles, B. Ball vs. H. Bild; at 10:45 a. m., senior girls singles, M. Quigley vs. E. Dinges; at 2:30 p. m., Senior boys doubles, Bill Lundy vs. George Sparks; at 4 p. m., Senior boys singles, L. Robertson vs. G. Wright; at 5:30 p. m., unlimited men singles, E. Paulette vs. P. Heins, and at 6:15 p. m., unlimited men doubles, Heins-Smith vs. Van Meter-Fielding.

Somerset Poultrymen Going to College Park

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., Aug. 11.—Somerset County poultrymen and farmers are making plans to attend the annual summer meeting of the Northeastern Poultry Producers Council beginning Wednesday at the University of Maryland, College Park, and continuing to Saturday.

C. Z. Keller, county agent for Somerset, who will head the local delegation, stated that this is the first time that the council has ever met in Maryland and approximately 1,000 persons are expected to attend. Practically every phase of the poultry industry, including production, marketing, organization and standardization of products will be discussed by nationally known authorities.

Officers Shoot Man Who Attacked Ex-Wife

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hancock, Md., Aug. 11.—Preston Bishop, for whom a warrant charging assault with intent to kill was issued last week after an alleged attack upon Nora W. Mason, his former wife, was captured in Fulton County, Pa., near here yesterday after being slightly wounded by county officers assisted by Pennsylvania State police.

Bishop escaped from officers last week and then was wounded in the leg. Last night he attempted to escape a trap set by officers, but surrendered when several slugs from a shotgun struck him in the face. He was taken to the Washington County Jail at Hagerstown.

Relief Fraud Charged.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 11.—Charged with having forged a relief check obtained fraudulently at local headquarters, Jess Snow and Allen Miller, Martinsburg youths, were ordered held for action of the grand jury following preliminary hearings here yesterday.

The check was for $4.80 and was made payable to Paul Unger, relief worker. Officers charged that one of the youths obtained the check at relief headquarters by representing himself as Unger. The check was later cashed at a downtown restaurant, officers charged. Both youths are in jail.

Fairfax C. of C. Picks Ferguson For President

Mrs. Mary Cullen, Vienna, Williams and Stafford Also Elected.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of Fairfax County, Va., has elected Wirt H. Ferguson, of Falls Church, president to succeed E. Russell White, of Springfield.

Other officers elected include Mrs. Mary Cullen, of Vienna, first vice president and secretary; Herbert Williams, of East Woodford, second vice president, and A. LeGrand Stafford, of Fairfax, treasurer.

The regular meeting of the chamber Tuesday night will be devoted to a discussion of rural electrification. The meeting in September will have for its consideration the proposed bond issue for school building purposes.

Superintendent of Schools W. T. Woodson will be invited to discuss the proposed county-wide school building program which is to be financed partly through a grant from the Federal Government and the balance of about $187,000 through a county bond issue. At a later meeting opponents of the bond issue will be given an opportunity to address the chamber.

The School and Civic League and the Volunteer Fire Department of McLean, Va., which sponsored the annual McLean carnival, have decided to hold the carnival Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. The carnival opened on July 27 but because of infantile paralysis and the health regulation prohibiting the attendance of children under 16 the receipts were much smaller than previous years so the committee in charge decided to hold the final celebration this week.

Work of widening the Richmond-Washington highway between Accotink and Fort Belvoir, a distance of 0.6 mile, was begun yesterday by the Northern Virginia Construction Co. The roadway will be widened for three-lane traffic. A bridge on the underpass where the railway crosses the highway, will also be widened, and the work is expected to be completed before November.

This is the last link in the highway between Alexandria and Fredericksburg which has not been widened for three-lane traffic and a number of serious accidents have occurred here during the last several years. A number of local men are being employed on the project.

Shot 3 Times, Man Has Slim Chance to Live

Md. Wife Is Held Pending Outcome of Injuries to R. K. Hayden.

Physicians give Robert Kermit Hayden, 32, of Tomkinsville, Md., only a slight chance of recovery from the bullet wounds allegedly inflicted upon him by his 24-year-old wife, Annie May.

His wife fired three bullets into his chest after an argument at their cottage in the Maryland town on Saturday night, Washington police claim. Mrs. Hayden, mother of five children, is said to have told Fifth Precinct police that she shot him when she could no longer endure his abuse.

After allegedly discharging a .22-caliber rifle at her husband, Mrs. Hayden brought him to Providence Hospital early yesterday and then told her story to Lieut. John Flaherty of the Fifth Precinct police.

For three years, she said, her husband had been drinking heavily and frequently had beaten her.

On Saturday night they planned to attend a church party near La Plata, Md. Before she left Hayden became drunk and abusive, forbidding her to attend the church party, she was quoted as saying.

As he laced his shoes, she said, she took the gun and fired at him.

Peach Shipping Gets Under Way

Prices Are Described as 'Satisfactory.'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 11.—The shipping of Albemarle's large commercial peach crop will start in earnest tomorrow and is expected to be in full blast by the middle of the week. The first of the yield, estimated at approximately 450 carloads, left Crozet this week-end.

Prices are described by growers and shippers as "satisfactory," with quotations on the Baltimore market ranging well above $2. Prices paid in the county will be at these figures, less transportation charges. Numerous representatives of fruit brokers visited Crozet last week. Shipping is expected to continue until around September 1.

Three varieties are now being picked in the area centering around Crozet. They are the Elberta, which is bringing from $2.15 to $2.50 in Baltimore; the Georgia Belles, bringing from $2 to $2.50, and the Haleys, bringing around $2.

Estimates of the local crop yield vary from 50 to 100 per cent above that of last year. One broker said that the yield would approximate 50 per cent above normal.

In order to obtain the proposed combination armory and community center Alexandria only will have to furnish the land on which to place it—and assume a small part of the expense of construction, approximately $4,000 or $5,000. Plans will be taken under advisement by City Manager E. C. Dunn as soon as received.

Banker Lauds Farm Youths At Convention

Loans Always Available to Club Members of Integrity, Copper Says.

Bankers of Maryland are always willing to give financial assistance to agricultural projects sponsored by young people of good character and reputation, W. B. Copper, of the agricultural committee of the Maryland State Bankers Association, told the State 4H Club conclave yesterday.

Addressing 350 members in the University of Maryland agricultural building at College Park, he emphasized that the successful 4H Club member in any community is the one who has built a good name.

Copper praised the work of the farm youth organization in the State and declared that club work is most definitely assisting to build the future of Maryland agriculture. He said the State Bankers Association has always taken a deep interest in the progress of these clubs in the State.

Others who spoke at the assembly were Gladys Perdue, Worcester County; Frank McFarland, Allegany County; Elizabeth Twining, Baltimore County, and George Stauffer, Frederick County. Several selections were given by the Beltsville Girls' Glee Club, directed by Mrs. L. L. Hurley.

FAITH in America's future?

FAINT-HEARTED pessimists have cried out that our future is black . . . that Youth has little faith in tomorrow. They have mouthed platitudes and implored you to "show your faith in America's future." Their fears are foolish, aren't they, son?

FOR YOU DO have faith in America's future . . . more faith than the professional worriers who have been plaguing America. After all . . . it's your future, and you have proved your interest and belief in it by working hard . . . equipping yourself for bigger things to come.

AND THAT'S the only way to prove your faith in the future. All the protestations of faith can not equal hard work . . . planning . . . building . . . for actions speak louder than words. You're moulding your character . . . learning business methods . . . acquiring the invaluable habits of promptness, accuracy, responsibility, which will smooth the road to success.

OF COURSE you have faith in America's future . . . for you, as a growing boy, are America's future.

Courtney Ryley Cooper's '10,000 Public Enemies'

Chapter XXIX—Squires for Gangsters.

Fate does strange things. I ran away from home to become an actor and instead became a clown in a circus. Coming home at the insistence of my mother—mothers are peculiar that way—I eventually became a newspaper man. My first run was the undertaker shops and the coroner's office. In many of the first-named, I met all the brutality to which supposed sanctuaries of death then were subject; the callousness, the lewd jokes about the dead, the eternal pressure salesmanship upon the bereaved, in the effort to sell them more expensive trappings of burial than they could afford. A youth received much disillusionment in such surroundings.

Then there was the coroner's office, which took me into the ghastliness of train wrecks or the horrible moments when, hesitating on a veranda, I at last found the courage to press a bell and to tell the tense woman who answered that her husband had been killed in a saloon brawl. From the coroner I also learned that all criminals are not brave and that some will even shoot a policeman in the back.

It was inevitable that I should become a police reporter, my good fortune that, deservedly of not, I should be classed by my office as something of a crack man on the job. So, during the ensuing years when, day and night, I obeyed the call of crime, I found that, after all, there was no Santa Claus in the world of lawlessness.

Thirteen times I have walked through the little door with men whose arms were bound tight to their sides, and whose legs were fastened immediately they came upon the scaffold. I knew all of them, because, obeying some strange impulse, I had spent their last night on earth with them upon a basis of friendship engendered through months of acquaintanceship. I knew them not as criminals about to be shrouded in a black cap and dropped through a wooden trap where the doctors waited to establish death. Instead, they became quite ordinary individuals, with the gloss rubbed off. I found no true bravery, only that numbing of realization which seems to afflict the human brain in times of great stress; these men were mere automatons, with the same sort of mechanical ability to walk and talk which comes to any person when the pressure is more than nerves can bear.

Out of the hundreds of murder trials, I learned that the function of some criminal attorneys, under our comic-opera laws, seem to be not to aid justice, but to obstruct it by every device known to the human brain. I have known many who were far worse rats than the guilty ones they defended.

I was a confidant of judges. For a time it made me suffer to see some of them consorting with the very crooks who had faced them in the courtroom. I got drunk with detectives and discovered what sometimes became of stolen money. One proudly boasted that in his career he had taken more than $100,000 from bandits during the process of arrest. It was not robbery. He simply made a deal in which he was to find a good lawyer for the crook, split the cash with the attorney and, for the rest, color his testimony to aid the criminal.

Excursions Intended To Save Innocent

There were times when I went with police into another State to bring back some criminal, supposedly badly wanted. Practically all of these were honest cases, but there were several where the excursions were to save a protected man. In the other State, the prisoner might be convicted of a serious felony. In the one to which he was being returned, charges could be dismissed or the bail, put up by the makers of "straw" or fake bonds, ultimately forfeited. Thus the criminal was freed, not by the police but by the politician who had forced inherently honest men to obey his orders or be fired.

During this long period, another boyhood illusion vanished. This concerned the belief that a person must be a superman to escape from jail. Even in youth I had wondered how certain prisoners could climb ventilator shafts while ordinary citizens failed at the task, or make tremendous leaps without injury, when someone else might be lugged to a hospital. Many times I found an explanation, but never such a clear one as in the comparatively recent escape of Harvey Bailey from the "escape-proof" jail at Dallas, Tex.

Because Bailey was one of the most dangerous criminals ever arrested in Texas, he was taken to Dallas following his capture on the Urschel kidnaping charge, and lodged in this super-jail under local guardianship. Let us go behind the scenes and see how Harvey Bailey made that "spectacular escape."

Bailey was a Federal prisoner held in a local jail. Immediately upon his escape, special agents were sent to the institution to inquire into the means by which the man had gained his freedom. Almost the first thing they discovered was that the several bars bore the marks of a Stillson wrench, used to break off the bars after they had been nearly cut through. Then, with the usual care of special agents, they determined by magnifying glasses that the breakage of the steel tended outward instead of inward. Most certainly, Harvey Bailey could not have been in and out of his cell at the same moment. Some one helped him and used that Stillson wrench to twist off the bars.

The Special Agents made a search of the prison. On the sixth floor they found a Stillson wrench in the desk of a jailor. Its jaws were still open to the exact size of the bars of Harvey Bailey's cell and they bore paint evidently wrested from the steel. So the rest was comparatively easy.

Jailer after jailer accounted for his actions. Thomas L. Manion, however, failed. At last he confessed. Perhaps the story comes best from his confederate, a Dallas butcher, Grover C. Bevill.

Butcher Describes His Confederate

"I had known Manion about 15 years. One night he called me up and asked me to meet him with my car and we drove out into the country to talk. He said he had a plan whereby we each could make $125. Then he told me to get him a gun, some cartridges and four hacksaw blades. I didn't ask any questions, but promised I'd do it.

"I had one hacksaw blade and broke up a meat saw to make the other three. A day later, Manion called and told me to get three new hacksaw blades; that the butcher's saw hadn't been able to cut the steel. I met his again and asked him what it was all about. He told me he was helping Bailey to get free, that he was one of the finest fellows he'd ever seen and was as innocent as could be. I did what he asked me.

"A few mornings later, I was cutting meat for a hotel order when Manion called again and asked if I knew Bailey was out. I told him I had been busy and didn't know anything about it. Well, he had escaped, Manion said, and he wanted me to help go hunt him. I told him I had this meat order to get up, but as soon as I was finished, I'd bring the car around and that we'd start out, which we did."

So there, in its rudiments, was the true story of the superhuman escape of Harvey Bailey from the escape-proof jail. The case had its sidelights. Those bars, it seems, were exceedingly tough. So the obliging jailer, when Bailey grew tired, got down on his knees and hacked away at the steel.

There comes a further fillip in the knowledge that neither Bevill nor Manion got a cent for his trouble. It seems that escapes these days are on a C. O. D. basis. There was also a sinister angle. Manion, all this time, was attempting to doublecross Bevill. Bailey had promised, when he was free, to rob six or seven banks, split the proceeds with the jailer, and make him rich.

There was an echo to Bailey's get-away and capture. It came in Chicago, where Shotgun George Zeigler and various members of the Barker-Karpis crowd got together now and then to talk over the Urschel kidnaping.

One night Shotgun George sat at a cafe table, reading of the get-away and recapture of his old friend, Bailey. A queer pallor had crept into Zeigler's face during these recent months; his ruddy, almost florid complexion was fading. There was more of a stare in his blue eyes, as though fleeting, horrible pictures constantly were crossing his vision—those seven men who sprawled in their blood on the floor of a garage, after the St. Valentine's massacre; or stiffened, tightly bound dead men, jutting through the ice of a frozen drainage ditch. Suddenly he ruffled a hand through his sandy brown hair and tossed the newspaper aside.

"Harve Bailey must have been crazy to have tried a thing like that!" he exclaimed. "What's gotten into him, anyway? Why, I can remember when he and I were on that bank-robbery job——"

"Sh-h-h-h, George!" exclaimed his woman. Alvin Karpis looked up from the other side of the table.

"You sure like to talk, don't you?" he asked quietly.

Shotgun George Talks of Others.

"It just makes me mad the things people do!" Shotgun George exclaimed. "Why didn't Bailey use his head? This'll go against him at his trial. You never heard of me pulling anything like that. Why, when all of us went out to Reno——

"Let's forget Reno," snapped Freddie Barker.

Zeigler glared about him.

"I wish there weren't people always butting in," he grumbled. "A fellow never gets a chance to talk."

Instinctively he felt his belt buckle where, in a secret compartment, he carried eight tiny saws for use in case of incarceration. Then, with another wild glance about him, he bent to his meal.

So now, the weakening reserve of Shotgun George and the steady strengthening of the Barker-Karpis mob must be relegated to silence, while a new set of characters moves onward along the trail blazed by Frank Nash and his companions. The Kelly-Bates-Bailey crowd was convicted early in the autumn of 1933. However, other first-page scareheads were to replace the ones which they had furnished. There was a crush-out from the Indiana State Penitentiary at Michigan City, Ind., in which eight men escaped, all of whom had been serving terms ranging from ten years to life.

Only four of them are of importance in this narrative, Harry Pierpont, Russell Clark, Charles Makley and John Hamilton. The remaining members were in much the same position as the other convicts who escaped from Lansing with the six "cows;" the hole was there and they went through. Makley, Pierpont, Clark and Hamilton, however, were the close friends of John Dillinger, who had come to know them while serving two concurrent sentences in the same institution. Dillinger had been paroled in May, 1933, and immediately had begun plans to aid his friends to escape.

Batting for Morgan Baker.

EMPLOYES of the Department of Agriculture have completed negotiations for a program of individual home ownership and are ready to begin a project of large-scale construction and sale of homes in the heights of Virginia, north of Alexandria. This announcement was made over the week-end by Frank Sammons, chairman of an organization of department employes known as the Community Planning Committee.

For months a general rent and housing committee has been laying plans and working out the details of this program which has culminated in the organization of this planning body.

Sammons said 150 family heads employed at the department already have indicated a willingness to participate in the project, which is being undertaken by employes, without Government aid. Funds for the construction of homes and purchase of lots will be made available through private concerns, Sammons stated. Under present plans, the employes will pay for the homes over a long-term, low-rate amortization schedule.

High rent and scarcity of homes available for Federal employes prompted Agriculture workers to begin investigating the possibilities of this project last spring. Early evidence of interest among the employes indicated from the outset that the plan had feasible possibilities.

Among Agriculture employes who have been active in this movement, in addition to Mr. Sammons, are: R. U. Bonnar, Food and Drug Administration, construction and architect committee; Roger Matteson, BAE, business and financial committee; George Day, BAE, publicity; Frank L. Lombard, BAE, general advisor; H. E. Bradburn, AAA, financial committee; C. I. Hendrickson, Land Economics, business committee, and R. H. Shields, Solicitor's Office, legal advisor.

Construction will begin immediately, according to reports from the committee.

Beginning Wednesday, members of the committee will be available every day after 4:30 p. m. to explain the project to interested employes.

Citizenship Wrangle.

Vincent Tutching, who has been under fire at FHA because he is alleged not to be an American citizen, has tendered his resignation, which will become effective August 15, according to information obtained from a reliable source.

Much criticism has been directed at FHA officials on the ground that Tutching was a Canadian citizen. He has been drawing a salary of $4,600 a year as office manager of the press section, it was learned.

Developments have taken a new turn recently. Tutching is now said to be trying to retain his job, displacing an American citizen. It is also reported that he has started proceedings to become naturalized.

Opposes "Poor and Broke."

"A letter was recently published in the Diary written by a man who bemoans the lack of gratitude of Government employes in general. He feels they should be deeply grateful for any job at all and especially one which provides so many advantages, namely, greater compensation than similar work in the business world, greater job security and leave privileges.

"In reply to the first statement, I should like to say that Government employes are not more ungrateful for their few blessings than the average citizen, and I have not the slightest doubt that many silent prayers of thankfulness "for any job at all," no matter if it be but a poorly paid one, have been sent heavenward during the dark days of the depression. On the other hand, let me remind our jobless friend that in the boom days preceding the depression those having well-paid jobs in the business world looked not with envy on the "poor Government clerk" with his underpaid job, the only advantage of which was its apparent permanence. They preferred the better compensated jobs outside the Government to the smaller-salaried job with its attendant security. Then came the crash—and away went many well-paid jobs. Then these jobless ones began looking with envious eyes on the poor little Government job at which they had formerly scoffed.

"A careful survey of positions in a number of the largest industrial cities of the United States has proved beyond refutation that positions in the first four grades of the Government service are equally as well-paid as similar class of work in the business world. Beyond that all jobs including work of a technical and scientific nature are paid far less in the Government than similar work performed in the business world.

"With the coming of the depression and the attendant economy program, the much-vaunted security of the Government job was swept into the discard and many found, to their distress, that after years of faithful service on pay that did not represent a "living wage" much less a "saving wage" they were summarily dropped in the interest of economy. So much for the security of the Government job.

"Statistics show that an average of less than 7 days sick leave per year is used by Government employes, and the average annual leave used was 28 days prior to its being cut to 15 days. So the total sick and annual leave used was 35 days on the average instead of the much criticised 60 days one heard so much about "I. J." (C).

It has been estimated by Federal Housing Administration that residential building contracts in 1935 will total approximately $400,000,000, according to an administration bulletin. This considerably exceeds last year's figure of $250,000,000. Prospects for further improvement in residential building in 1936 indicate that construction next year will double that of this year, according to the report.

Desperation Knows No Rule.

It is difficult to formulate rules for the type of opening lead known as the desperation lead. This sort of lead is made without rhyme or reason when conventional procedure reveals no remote hope of defeating declarer's contract. In such cases an opening lead may be made from combinations through which no one would ever dream of leading under normal circumstances. One of the most sensational opening leads I have ever seen happened in the hand shown below:

South, Dealer
East and West, vulnerable

	♠ K 10 ♡ J 9 6 ◇ A Q 10 6 5 3 ♣ A Q
♠ J 8 4 ♡ 7 ◇ K J 2 ♣ J 9 7 6 5 3	N W E S	♠ 9 7 6 5 3 2 ♡ 5 3 2 ◇ — ♣ 10 8 4 2
	♠ A Q ♡ A K Q 10 8 4 ◇ 9 8 7 4 ♣ K

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♡	Pass	3◇	Pass
4♡	Pass	5♡	Pass
6♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding was good, South's four little diamonds being the factor which kept him out of seven. Unless North's diamonds were solid, a trick would probably be lost in that suit. It will be noted South used the Jump Trump Rebid to show a nearly solid suit, but the informative value of his bid was in itself the reason the Four-Five No-trump Convention could not be used, for North did not have the necessary requirements to bid four notrump. He had the two Aces, but not the King of any suit bid by South, his partner.

The Play.

With normal defense, six hearts could easily have been made. West would have opened a club and whether or not South made six or seven would depend upon whether he took a double finesse in diamonds or a single finesse, or played the Ace on the first round.

Not even six-odd was made, for West chose the unusual opening lead of the Jack of diamonds. A glance at the combined diamond holdings of his own hand and dummy would convince South that the lead could conventionally have been made from only one of two possible holdings, Jack-singleton or Jack-doubleton. If the former, a finesse of the Queen would cause the contract to be defeated by a second-round ruff. If the latter, the play of the Ace would not only safeguard the contract, but would win an extra trick. There seemed to be no question but that the best play was dummy's Ace of diamonds. This South played, and felt the earth slipping from under his feet when East won the trick with a small trump. No discards were available to take care of South's other diamonds, and he could not avoid giving West an eventual trick with the diamond ten. These two tricks were enought to stop the Small Slam.

How West figured out the effectiveness of this false lead, I am not sure. Perhaps he had no reason other than his wish to do something as unusual as possible.

On The Air Today

The sophisticated drollness that marks Robert Montgomery's roles in pictures will receive ample opportunities for expression tonight in the Radio Theater, WJSV, at 8, when Montgomery and Irene Purcell are co-starred in "The Man in Possession." It is in this play that Montgomery, masquerading as a butler, eventually marries the woman who employed him. It was only a few weeks ago that he appeared on the air in the role of a valet who changed places with his master with most amusing results.

If you wish a full day of "drammer," you will probably wish to hear the Radio Guild's version of Galsworthy's "Justice," WMAL, at 3:30 p. m. It is being repeated by the Guild because of numerous requests. "Justice" became a hit in New York in 1916 due principally to the efforts of a rising new member of the Barrymore family—John.

Frances Comstock, blonde contralto of musical comedy, makes her radio debut today with the "Manhattan Matinee," WJSV, at 2:30. Miss Comstock has appeared most recently in "Life Begins at 8:40," in which she popularized the song, "What Can You Say in a Love Song?" Jerome Kern first employed her talents.

Couldn't help but be impressed by the marked similarity of the voice of the singer in the Canadian "Fiesta" program Saturday night and the distinctive voice of Rudy Vallee. To the casuel listener I believe the "Fiesta" singer would have been accepted as Vallee but for the steady background of the tango and rumba.

In referring to the play, the Princess Pat Players really should not be overlooked. Their offering tonight, WMAL, at 8:30, is "One Girl Defending," a thrilling episode based on heroism and sacrifice as the Mississippi becomes a raging torrent threatening a small village with destruction. The cast includes Joan Blaine, Robert Stone and Douglas Hope.

Jan Peerce will continue as soloist with the Gypsies until October 1, when the guest-artist policy will again be put into effect. The Gypsies, incidentally, are in their twelfth year. Harry Horlick, director of the orchestra, and Milton Cross, announcer, served in those capacities away back in 1924 when the program received its premiere. N. B. C. reports that Cross is the only announcer today who is permitted to prepare the continuity for a sponsored show. The Gypsies are heard Monday nights, at 8, WRC.

Audrey Call, violinist, again is featured by "Fibber McGee and Molly," WMAL, at 7. She will play her own plaintive interpretation of "When a Gypsy Makes His Violin Cry" . . . Radio Joe is celebrating "Fisherman's Night," at WMAL, at 7:30, and the air is expected to be filled with fun and foolishness in the name of fishermen, golfers—and prevaricators . . . Like band music? The Max Bendix band plays from Chicago's Grant Park, WRC, at 9:30 p. m.

The editor of Parents' Magazine, Mrs. Clara S. Littledale, will be interviewed by Mary Madison in the "Little House," WJSV, at 3 p. m. . . . Those Campbell Royalists, heard on Major Bowes' Sunday morning hour, now are to be featured in a program of their own—Mondays, at 2 p. m., WMAL. They are three girls and four boys, who learned to harmonize in a Kansas Quaker School and who sing every kind of composition from blues to opera.

Discovering America
With Maxine Davis

Denver, Aug. 11.—Children still work in the sugar-beet fields of Colorado.

As a matter of fact, all through the cotton and tobacco area of the South and the beet-sugar lands here in the West, child labor is taken as a matter of course.

It was a surprise to me, for I have been hearing much about the eradication of this evil since the birth of the codes.

I would not be shocked at the sight of youngsters, say, 10 years old, working on farms. But these are little tiny things, barely able to wobble about, out pulling weeds with their mothers and fathers and all their sisters and brothers, while the thermometer tries to break all records and the sun blazes until eyes squint and ache with the glare.

Now growers and processors don't employ this child labor. It's the mothers and fathers who take them into the fields; could not, in all probability, make a living without their help.

Out here the Great Western Sugar Co. explains that it is not the culprit. It is a long way from the little Mexican babies one sees in the rows of shining clean green beet tops. It's this way:

Beet farmers pay their tenants—Mexicans and other foreign persons—so much an acre for planting, topping and generally working the beets. The farmer is paid by the sugar company for the amount of beets he sells them. He consequently blinks his eyes at the methods used by his tenants to swell his crop. And, of course, he wants as much as he can get and the tenants need badly their scarcely luxurious wages.

At that, the sugar-beet crop this year will be the smallest since 1922, the Great Western Sugar Co. reports. Although good yields are in prospect, although termination of thinning and blocking finds the best stands in years and farmers are prepared to start timely irrigation, the planted acreages are the smallest in 13 years, because many of the farmers' associations would not accept the sugar agreements.

Consequently only 18 of the company's 22 mills will operate.

However, we won't want for beet sugar. In other companies and in other parts of the country, in the majority of instances, Government quotas have been reached, or practically so, and in many instances the quotas have been increased, compensating for reductions in this territory, usually the biggest of all the States.

I don't know how much of this whole crop depends on the work of babies. But it's true in Colorado today as it ever was when reformers first pointed out the situation.

Most of child labor in the United States, insofar as I have been able to observe, is in agriculture, and not in the great grain and trucking areas, either. I found very little of it in factories and mills, even in the so-called backward States.

Colorful Rites in Garden Will Unite Couple in New York.

The marriage of Miss Cynthia Dudley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Dean Dudley, of Syracuse, N. Y., to Mr. Charles D. Post, jr., of Boston, son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles D. Post, of Syracuse, will take place this afternoon. The ceremony will be performed in the garden of the Dudley home at 5 p. m. by Dr. Ray Freeman Jenney, pastor of the Park Central Presbyterian Church of Syracuse. A reception will follow.

The bride will be given in marriage by her father. She will wear a gown of ivory satin made on princess lines with tiny buttons of white satin down the front of the bodice. It is fashioned with long full sleeves caught at the wrist, a wide collar of family lace and a long skirt train lined with lace and net ruffle from the wedding gown of the bride's mother. The floor-length veil falls from a cap of finely tucked tulle and is held in place with sprays of orange blossoms. The bride will carry a bouquet of mixed garden flowers with one spray of blue larkspur and talisman roses.

The bride's sister, Miss Jane-Grey Dudley, will be maid of honor and will wear a close-fitting frock of peach crepe made with an upstanding stitched collar, long full sleeves and a brief train. Her turban of brown net is trimmed with a band of twisted peach and has a stiff flaring veil. She will wear sandals to match her dress and is carrying mixed flowers with blue larkspur predominating.

Miss Barbara Jacobs, of Bethlehem, Pa., and Miss Elizabeth Brooks, of Syracuse, will be bridesmaids. They will wear dresses of robin's egg blue, similar in design to that of the maid of honor. Talisman roses will predominate in their bouquets.

Mr. T. Denton Carman, of Newton, Mass., will be best man and the ushers will include Mr. A. V. W. Hancock, of Syracuse; Mr. Dudley Wainwright, of Concord, N. H., cousin of the bride and assistant attorney general of New Hampshire; Mr. Frank Goodwin, of Washington, and Mr. John Fox, of Detroit.

The terraces down which the bridal party will march will be lined with white gladioli. A priedieu, flanked by sheaves of gladioli, will stand by an oval pool in a corner of the garden. The house will be profusely decorated with summer flowers.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda the couple will live at 100 Clark street in Boston.

How to Brighten Closet.

Linen closets may be made attractive by nailing a piece of molding along the edge of the shelves and painting it a contrasting color. If the inside of the door is painted a gay, harmonizing color, it enhances the agreeable effect of the linen closet when the door is opened.

Horse Show Due At Chevy Chase On Saturday

Riding and Hunt Club to Hold Program to Include Ten Events.

The Riding and Hunt Club is looking forward to one of its most successful horse shows in years in the meet Saturday afternoon at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club, in Rock Creek Park at Chevy Chase, Md.

A lapse in the Virginia horse show schedule will provide exhibitors in the Old Dominion State with an opportunity to send their horses to the local event, while many of Maryland's best stables are expected to be represented.

The program will start at 1:30 p. m. and ten events will be staged. Sterling silver trophies will be presented class winners, while open jumping and hunter rosettes will go to champions of those divisions.

Award of the hunter tricolor will be based on point scoring in the open hunters, corinthian, hack and hunter and lead-in classes, while the jumping championship will be decided on points counted in the working hunter, open jumping, handy hunter and manners of horse and balance of rider classes.

Col. Charles L. Scott and Mr. Fenton Fadeley, who arranged the program, also have carded an open saddle class and a ladies' hunter class. No children's program was arranged because many juvenile exhibitors are vacationing.

Mr. Jack Allen, chairman for the show, said last night that Mr. John C. Butler, of Rectortown, and Mr. Courtland H. Smith, of The Plains, have accepted invitations to be judges.

Hyattsville Girl Is Married to Mr. Lauderdale

One of the loveliest weddings of the summer season in nearby Prince Georges County, Md., took place Saturday evening at 8 o'clock when Miss Margaret Naylor, of Hyattsville, sister of Mrs. Harry Woodward Dorsey, of 39 Franklin street, and Mr. James Warthen Lauderdale, son of Mrs. Ella W. Lauderdale, of Covelawn Orchards, Va., and a resident of Washington, were married in Pinkney Memorial Protestant Episcopal Church, Hyattsville.

The ceremony was attended by a large company of relatives and friends. The Rev. Lawton Riley, rector of Pinkney Memorial Church, officiated.

Gowned in Ivory Chiffon.

Mr. Harry Woodward Dorsey, brother-in-law of the bride, gave her in marriage. The bride was gowned in ivory chiffon, made on princess lines, with plaited fan-shaped train. Her veil was cap-shaped and was trimmed with Brussels lace. She carried bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Alfred Dunlop Bailey, jr., of College Heights, Md., was the matron of honor. She was attired in green chiffon trimmed with satin, with hat of the same materials. She carried asters shading from lavender to deep purple.

The bridesmaids were Miss Charlotte Templeman Dorsey, of Hyattsville; Miss Elizabeth Naylor, of Montgomery County, sister of the bride; Miss Mary Virginia Lauderdale, of Washington, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Edwin Hays Gott, of Edgewater Park, N. J. All were in yellow chiffon trimmed with satin and all carried yellow souvenir roses and blue delphinium.

Young Set of Capital Enjoys Rain, Donning Fitting Attire

Cloudy Weather Brings Out Appropriate Clothes for Walks, Shopping.

The last week, with its cloudy and rainy days, didn't dampen the spirits of the younger members of Washington society and many admitted they rather enjoyed donning their rough clothes for walks.

Among those who were snapped last week out for strolls was Miss Laura S. Johnson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Bridges Johnson, who wore pale green crepe, with a dark green broad leather belt, with green plaiting at the neck and cuffs. She also wore a brown straw hat and brown kid shoes.

Miss Edith Gosnell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gosnell, of Springdale, Ark., who is visiting Dr. and Mrs. E. R. Wagner, wore for her shopping tour a navy blue light-weight coat, over a white linen sport dress, made on simple lines. She wore white linen sport sandals and accessories.

Mrs. John David McGee, jr., who, before her recent marriage, was Miss Narcissa Sulivan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan, took her Scottie, Meggy, for a stroll despite the rain. Meggy seems somewhat waterlogged, but Mrs. McGee is cheerful notwithstanding the downpour. For the occasion she wore a waterproof tweed coat of beige, dark brown suede pumps and a dark brown felt sport hat.

Another attractive person who braved the rain was Miss Helen Peeples, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howell Peeples, who wore a natural-colored belted camel's hair coat over a brown jersey skirt and blouse. To complete her costume she wore a brown felt hat and brown accessories.

The wedding will take place in St. Mathews Church on August 31.

Door Mirrors Are Handy.

If a room doesn't have sufficient mirror space, or if the dressing-table mirror isn't long enough to see how the skirt hangs at the same time you look at the feather in your hat, mirrors may be hung on the back of a door without taking up valuable wall space. Closet doors or the door leading to the bath are excellent places to hang a full-length mirror.

Autumn Coats Made by Men Smart Change

Last Word in Chic for Women; Another Shop Has Skin Brush.

By Dudley Harmon,
Pinch Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

WE SINCERELY hope that you haven't yet made your fall coat selection, for the other day we spotted in our rambles the smartest sports coat we've seen around these parts for a long time. Oddly enough, they're on sale at a men's store, for they were made by men. Nothing is more piquant than a fair lady rigged up in a mannish topcoat. You don't have to be a Marlene Dietrich to get away with it either. The effect on anyone under 70 is the last word in chic. For town or country, they are equally smart and modish.

The nicest feature about coats made up in men's fashions is that they never go out of style. They'll be just as smart a few years hence.

Made by men as these coats are, they are superlatively tailored. All the seams, for example, are taped. Taped seams wear like iron and don't fray.

And the linings. Made of pure celanese silk, they, too, are beautifully stitched and finished. Furthermore, they're guaranteed to last the lifetime of the coat, and if they don't, you can get them replaced free.

You might be able to tear the buttons off with a crowbar, but we tugged and tugged, and nothing happened. Quite different from the usual experience with a new coat, where the buttons start popping off in all directions after the first few days.

The materials come in tweeds, camel's hair and covert cloth. The tweeds are of the Harris variety, imported from England, where all good tweeds are born.

The covert cloth is woven especially for this store in England. This material is rain and wind proof. If the sky opens up on you when you're clad in one of these, it won't make any difference, for they're guaranteed not to muss or wrinkle.

This store also has some trench coats, which will make you yearn for lots of rainy days. Instead of looking like a shapeless mass, the way most rain coats do, these are smartly tailored, with a definite chic all their own. They're priced at $15.

These coats all have detachable linings, so that when winter comes they'll be just as serviceable as in the fall.

Now let's get down to prices. These coats cost anywhere from $35 to $50, but, and here's where a gleam should light up your eye, they're being sold at a 20 per cent reduction.

I you're a long-legged person whom most coats strike somewhere above the knees, they'll lengthen it for you free. All other alterations are free.

Camouflage in Order.

THIS SEEMS to be a great year for camouflage. The better you can succeed in making an object look like something else, the happier you'll be, or at least so it would seem from various articles noted in local department stores this month.

They're even disguising boxes of facial tissues now, we learn. Of coure, these containers are unsightly things anyway, and so we're all for it. A local store is giving away, with every three boxes of a certain tissue purchased, another box to slip over them. This outside covering comes in pink, peach, green and blue, to match any bedroom, and is very handsome.

Brush for the Skin.

THE ONLY THING skin and hair have in common is that a good brushing does them both a lot of good. We take it for granted youve got a hair brush, but have you one for your skin as well? If not, go down to an F street store and get one of its handy little brushes, made especially for the face.

Nothing cleans the skin quite as thoroughly as these bristles do. They lift out blackheads and are excellent for a sluggish circulation. After a session with one of these your face will emerge with the rosy glow of a first-rate sunset. The brushes are shaped to fit face and hand, and have a waterproof back. Furthermore, the bristles are guaranteed not to come out. They cost $1.

THIS WAS my room
I leave it to you;
Do not keep it ordered,
Polished and new.

Let my shining silver
Tarnish and rust,
What use is silver
To the fragile dust?

Scatter on my neat desk
Every bill and letter.
Who would have a fragment
Of sweet earth for debtor?

Throw open my window
To the slant of rain.
Curtains may be ruffled.
Winding sheets are plain.

Throw open my latched door,
Let in your lover.
The door cannot be opened

Harvest.

AY, RAID MY orchards, now the fruit is ripe,
And over the low wall the wild grape
Hangs its purple cloak! The golden-rod
Stands dessicated in the fields where corn
Might well have grown, had there been any need
For planting!

A man has sons to follow him along
A dark furrow in the earth; to sow in spring,
And reap at harvest; a man has sturdy sons
Keep his cattle fed, to sell and barter
In the public market. A man's sons learn
To know and love, as he before them learned
To know and love—the soil.

But mine are gone—
Swallowed by steel and stone, the cities' gorge,
Drowned in a sea of anonymity.
All but one, whose slender, woman's hands
Could never guide a plow, or swing a sledge.
Why should he, of all my sons, return,
Who, watching the horizon, dares to see

My Irish Great-Grandfather, Patrick O'Flyng.

(To H. W. D.)

ALTHOUGH IN THE main I am like other men,
I am shaken with fever-throbs now and again.
On the plain of my spirit the galloping feet
Of the bellowing tempests of turbulence beat.
Then I glance at my lineage, all the long line,
To determine the source of this ailment of mine,
And I'm moved to remark, what accounts for this thing
Is my Irish great-grandfather, Patrick O'Flyng.

That about seven-eighths of me's plain human race
But I shout it today and I'll shout it tomorra',
The other one-eighth o' me's Irish, begorra.
If it's proof that you're wantin', I'll give ye a tip:
Just glance, if ye will, at me long upper lip,
Though I'm fearin' that it's the sole feature I bring
From my Irish great-grandfather, Patrick O'Flyng.

I've a temper which knows neither reason nor rhyme,
And it rules me exactly one-eighth of the time.
It's as wild as the face of a thistle-sown bog,
And as fierce as a storm and as blind as a fog.
My wife and my children are wise to the case:
They are quiet as mice, and they keep to their place,
And they whisper, while dodging the stones from my sling,
'It's his Irish great-grandfather, Patrick O'Flyng!'

I've a song on my lips and a pain in my heart,
And a fanciful longing, a grief, and a smart,
I've a beautiful picture that lives in my eye,
And it lures me to follow a dream till I die.
It's a burden of tears, and it's beauty and faith;
It's a shadowy vision, a ghost, and a wraith.
It's a fate and a curse and a blessing I bring
From my Irish great-grandfather, Patrick O'Flyng.

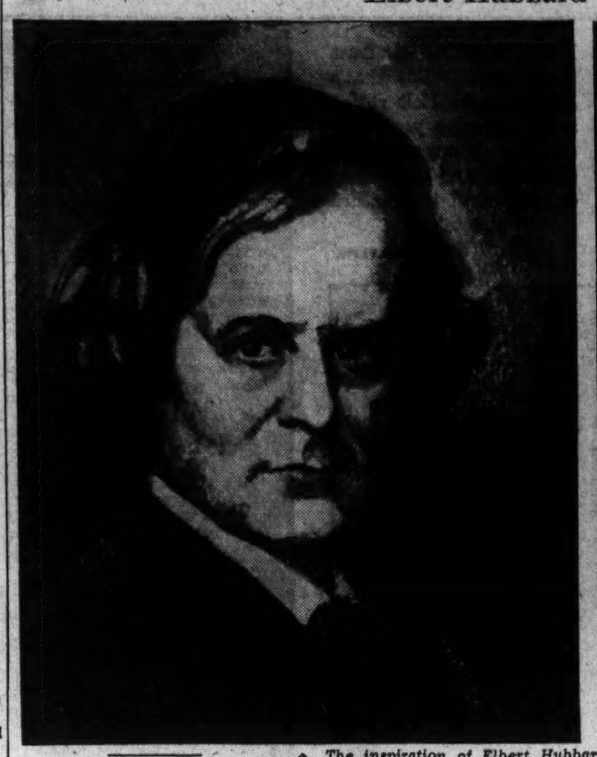
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Elbert Hubbard—Alice Moore.



The inspiration of Elbert Hubbard's career was Alice Moore, the sage's second wife, whom he called his "White Hyacinth." Mrs. Hubbard was widely known as a feminist and writer. The two perished together on the Lusitania.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

"The ship may sink
And I may drink
A hasty death in the bitter sea;
But all that I leave in the ocean grave
Can be slipped and spared no loss to me.

Let go the breath
To the living soul, nor loss nor harm;
Not of the clod
Is the life of God,
Let it mount as it will from form to form."

HEROIC ATTEMPTS to raise from the sea the ill-fated steamship Lusitania, victim of the World War U-boat campaign, has revived interest in the human loss incurred in that marine tragedy on the fatal morning of May 7, 1915, off the Old Head of Kinsale, Ireland.

Among the famous persons who lost their lives on the great liner were Elbert Hubbard and his wife, Alice Hubbard. Hubbard for 30 years had been a literary figure and personal guide and philosopher to thousands of Americans, and Mrs. Hubbard, as one of the ardent advocates of woman suffrage and a brilliant writer, occupied a niche of her own among American feminists.

Through a curious premonition Hubbard had forecast his own death at sea when he wrote, some time before the tragedy, speaking of himself as "a drowning man who sees the record of his life streaming behind him." Again, in the same May, 1915, edition of the Philistine, he declared "Well do we speak of 'the waters of life.'"

In but a few short weeks after he had written those words he was to taste of the "salty waters of death."

Writing of Elbert Hubbard, one must recall the unusual romance between him and Alice Moore, who afterward became his second wife. The devotion between them was so thorough and all-embracing that no doubt, had he been able to choose the manner of his passing, he would have asked to have died with her.

Strangely enough, we have testimony on this point from Hubbard's own pen. In commenting on the death of Mr. and Mrs. Isador Straus, the New York philanthropists, who died together on the Titantic some years before, the savant had written: "They knew how to do three great things—how to live, how to love and how to die. To pass out as did Mr. and Mrs. Isador Straus is glorious. Few have such a privilege. In life they were never separated and in death they are not divided."

Back of the success of Elbert Hubbard at Roycroft and in his writings and lecture career stood the genius of Alice (Moore) Hubbard. Most of his idealism came from her and it was upon her desire that after a successful business career he took a course in college to perfect his literary attainments.

His "White Hyacinth," as he so frequently called her, was a gentle, sweet woman for all the fire of her crusader nature, and she made East Aurora a home not only for Fra Elbertus but for all who came beneath the Roycroft aegis.

Elbert Hubbard was a true type of the native American genius. His family roots were struck deep into the soil of the New World, reaching back to one George Hubbard of Eastern England descended from Hubba, a Danish king, one of the victors over the English in 866 A. D. This George Hubbard born in 1601 was the first American Hubbard and he joined the good folk of the Connecticut colony under Parson Hooker.

Ancestors Enterprising.

George Hubbard's son, Daniel, was the direct ancestor of Elbert Hubbard. The line continued, generation after generation, full of good works and civic enterprise, further and further again from the Atlantic seaboard to the more adventurous Middle West, until in 1856 we find young Dr. Silas Hubbard and his wife settled in the town of Bloomington, Ill., where, on June 19 of that year a son, Elbert Hubbard, was born.

Speaking of his father, Hubbard said in his autobiography: "My father was a country doctor, whose income never exceeded $500 a year. I left school at 15 with a fair hold on the three R's and beyond this my education in 'manual training' had been good.

"I would teach wild cows to stand while being milked; break horses to saddle or harness; could sow, plow and reap, knew the mysteries of apple butter, pumpkin pie, pickled beef, smoked side-meat, and could make lye at a leach and formulate soft soap. That is to say I was a bright, strong, active country boy who had been brought up to help his father and mother get a living for a large family."

After 15 the lure of the Far West caught young Hubbard's fancy and he left home, engaging in a variety of occupations, as cowboy, printer, soap peddler, lumber husky, newspaper man and teacher of a district school. He visited Europe, where he met William Morris and his whole outlook on life was changed by the meeting.

All this took time and years and struggle until we find Elbert Hubbard settled at East Aurora. His first romance had resulted in his marriage June 30, 1881, to Miss Bertha C. Crawford, of Normal, Ill. They had children and were seemingly happy. But misunderstanding grew up between them and Mrs. Hubbard obtained a divorce.

Record Not Complete.

The record is not quite clear as to where and when Elbert Hubbard first met Alice Moore—his "White Hyacinth."

Alice Moore was born June 7, 1861, at Wales, N. Y., of the same sturdy American stock as her husband-to-be. Well educated, she was a member of a refined household and for some time lived in Concord, Mass., where the literary atmosphere aroused like impulses. When she became interested in the woman's cause she wrote widely on that topic, achieving much for it through her genius. No less a suffrage leader than Dr. Anna Howard Shaw attests to this. She wrote of Alice Moore Hubbard after her tragic death on the Lusitania:

"Alice Hubbard always stood bravely before the world in the advocacy of the cause of woman, using her fine literary gifts unsparingly in the setting forth of woman's right to be considered one-half of the human race, and in defense of all womanhood against the blatant cruelty and injustice of the social order.

On their first meeting, it is said that Alice Moore and Elbert Hubbard felt a kinship of spirit and soul. After their marriage she was his helpmeet, comrade and inspiration in every sense of the word.

Alice Moore had been a school teacher before her marriage and her fund of knowledge was always at the disposal of her husband in his writings. To her, no doubt, are due many of the erudite touches which distinguish his work. A daughter, Miriam, was born to them and with the advent of the child friends say their happiness was complete.

Across the sky of this happiness dawned war clouds in 1914. In the spring of 1915 Elbert Hubbard received a commission to visit some of the warring countries and write about them for a syndicate of American newspapers. He accepted the offer and, of course, Alice Hubbard was to go with him.

Off the coast of Ireland the Goth got in his work. The Lusitania was sinking. Hand in hand Elbert and Alice Hubbard faced the inevitable. An eyewitness who escaped told of seeing them come out of their cabin arm in arm, onto the boat deck.

"Hubbard called to a friend, 'Well, Jack, they have got us. They are a d—— sight worse than I ever thought they were!'

"What are you going to do?" asked the friend.

"The Fra shook his head. Alice replied: 'There does not seem to be anything to do.'

"Then they turned away, still arm in arm, and entered their cabin. They were not seen again."

Might not Hubbard have written his own epitaph and that of the woman he so loved when he wrote these lines: "With Mother Nature we are happy and content; and when the twilight gathers, and for us the day is done, she will hold us in her loving arms, and croon us a lullaby, as care casts anchor in the harbor of a dream."

Their Deaths Together Aboard the Lusitania Was Portended.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Start Tooth Care Early.

PROBABLY more pain, discomfort and disease result from poor or neglected teeth than from derangements of any other body structure.

Most of us have but two sets of teeth in a lifetime. The first or temporary set consists of 20 teeth, while the second or permanent set numbers 32. Six to 8 teeth have appeared by the time a child is a year old, 16 when he is a year and a half, and all 20 by the time he is 2½. Anywhere between the ages of 5 and 7 the first four permanent teeth—"the 7-year-old molars"—appear, and from that time onward the first teeth begin to fall out to be replaced by the permanent teeth.

A diet which is composed largely of soft foods is inadequate for the development and preservation of good teeth. There must be a sufficient amount of calcium, phosphorus, protein, and particularly vitamin D, and in this respect milk is an important factor.

English investigators at the present time are emphasizing rather strongly a reduction in the amount of cereal fed to infants, on the ground that certain grains contain a substance that neutralizes vitamin D. Perhaps this theory has not been wholly substantiated. Nevertheless, the rule should be that if cereals are used freely a considerable quantity of vitamin D should be supplied and outdoor play encouraged for the purpose of securing a generous amount of sunshine. Another fact that should be borne in mind is that calcium is more rapidly eliminated from the body if sugar and certain other carbohydrates are used to excess. Hence the use of sugar should be confined to meal time.

As soon as all the temporary teeth have appeared the child should be initiated into tooth care by a visit to the dentist. Make this visit a semi-annual affair.

The teeth need food just as much as the lungs need air. I occasionally lose what little poise I possess in observing the finicky diets of some of my adult friends. They do not like this or that, and I am not surprised to learn of rather heavy dental bills, a considerable number of which may be traced to "pap" diets. Nature designed teeth for chewing; for the thorough mastication of foods containing fiber. When our diets consist of food so soft that they require merely to be swallowed, nature will deprive us of our teeth.

Pattern No. 874.

A DRESS-AND-COAT ensemble is the universal favorite for week-ends, for traveling, or for just getting about the town. This one has the new high neck line and a youthful flare to the collarless coat.

For now, linen, shantung, or a pretty novelty cotton would be cool and smart. For traveling, or for wear on into autumn, a silk or wool crepe would be good.

A large instruction chart comes with the pattern, which is guaranteed perfect in cut and accurate in size. Cut in sizes 14 to 20; 32 to 38. Size 16 (34) with short-sleeved frock, requires 5⅛ yards of 39-inch material, and ⅝ yard for the collar.

Rural School Teacher, To Be Located in Town of 500 Inhabitants This Winter, Asks Advice in Assembling Wardrobe.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: As a voluntary student of applied psychology I never fail to read your column in The Post. I read similar columns in other papers also, but I consider yours the best of all because of your apparently bottomless source of information, your extraordinary gift of understanding and your conservative, yet progressively modern attitude. Now I am coming to you for help.

I am getting ready for my second year of teaching in the public schools. My first year was in a very small rural school. This year I am to be in a village junior high. The place has about 500 inhabitants and is about 40 miles from a large city.

* * * *

My problem is this: What shall constitute a complete wardrobe? I am 5 feet 1 inch tall, weigh about 135 pounds (which I hope to reduce); have blue-gray eyes and dark brown wavy hair (bobbed); and wear tortoise shell-rimmed glasses. Please give me an itemized list of what will be needed until, say, November 1.

* * * *

Is it permissible to wear a navy blue outfit with straw hat until early October? If not, what would you suggest? I wish to be dressed conservatively and not be conspicuous either for good or bad gowning. I am not able to buy new things now.

* * * *

Although I have been away from home for several years, my tendency has been to carry too many things. Now I am afraid that as I try to limit them, I may go to the other extreme and not take enough for use in this new place. Is an evening dress necessary? I do not dance, and seldom attend any formal affairs. I wish, however, to take sufficient part in community affairs to know and gain the cooperation of my patrons.

I shall appreciate an early reply. Very truly yours,

GARIZ.

The Essential Garments.

DEAR GARIZ:

What constitutes a complete wardrobe? I should say one's wardrobe is incomplete in essentials when it includes enough garments suited to the climate and one's activities to keep one always immaculately and comfortably clad. If you will keep that definition in mind, you should be able to figure out for yourself what clothing you will need as teacher in a town of 500 inhabitants.

However, since all women love to talk about clothes, I am quite willing to expound on the subject in more detail. You should take at least three schoolroom outfits, although six would be ideal; one instep-length evening gown with matching jacket (plain black or plain white, in rather heavy crepe would be smartest and at the same time look simplest); one dressy daytime dress, very simply cut, perhaps 2 inches longer than your workaday garments, for wear when playing hostess at informal school entertainments; when going to church, dining informally with friends, or when attending afternoon affairs where your hostess and other guests are likely to make a similar concession to the event.

* * * *

You will need a rain coat, as well as light overshoes, galoshes and umbrella; a lightweight but warm topcoat, possibly an interlined tweed; and later a heavier coat. For all-purpose utility I think a carefully chosen lapin fur coat the best bet for midwinter wear in this climate. It is warm and durable, and if well selected and well cared for, is just as effective when worn over evening clothes as when worn for daytime. I am speaking, of course, with the person of very modest means in mind.

* * * *

You should have at least two pairs of comfortable, conservatively styled shoes for classroom wear, preferably oxford ties; a pair of dressier oxfords and perhaps another pair of the type known as "opera pumps" which could be worn interchangably with the dressy daytime dress; either kid or satin sandals to match the color of your evening dress; and a pair of heavy soled oxfords or brogans for walking and for wear to out-of-doors athletic events.

You will find a washable silk negligee and a tailored flannel lounging robe indispensable, while a bathrobe of heavy toweling might be very useful if you should be sharing a bath with others. I would suggest, too, a couple of short-sleeved cotton wash dresses, for morning wear at home of week-ends, when you may be cleaning your room or doing light laundry work.

* * * *

Take at least four sleeping garments, although six would be better. I prefer handmade cotton garments to sleazy rayon or crepes. You will need at least three slips (buy more if you can afford to) and double that amount of other undergarments, although you can manage on less if you must, providing the landlady will let you do your own laundering.

* * * *

If, like every one else, you buy those handy disposable tissue handkerchiefs by the box and use them for nearly every handkerchief purpose, you won't need more than a dozen linen or lawn handkerchiefs. Have one or two chiffon handkerchiefs for dress-up evening occasions; and as for gloves, get heavy washable cotton ones for daytime. Choose them in beige, tan, gray or black, to match the things they will be worn with. It's unlikely you'll be wearing gloves with evening dress other than to keep your hands warm, and in that case, one or two-button white kid, or even a loose fitting chamois gauntlet glove in white, does nicely. Such gloves are laid aside with one's outer wrap.

* * * *

Now, about that navy blue outfit with straw hat. The navy blue outfit can be worn until the end of Indian Summer, and possibly throughout the winter, if it's of sufficiently heavy material. If it's a transparent sheer, you'll probably have to lay it aside after the first of September. Straw hats are usually taboo after the first of September, so I suggest you invest in an inexpensive navy blue felt, if the dress is wearable into the autumn.

* * * *

You asked what constitutes a complete wardrobe for a small-town school teacher. I think she would be very well dressed if she owned the items listed herewith. But I also think that any clever woman can always manage to look smart on half, or less than half, of a complete wardrobe.

Make the best of what you have now, and as the pay checks come in regularly, shape your wardrobe something along the lines suggested here. Remember that high school boys and girls are particularly sensitive to and snobbish about appearance, and that they bring a great deal more responsiveness to the well-dressed teacher who impresses them as possessing style, individuality, charm and personal attractiveness, than they do the dowdy school ma'am.

* * * *

I remember in my own high school days the acknowledged moulder of class opinion moaning, "Ye gods, the same old skirt," as a pretty, efficient English teacher called the room to order on the opening day of her second year in the department. She was wearing a shepherd-check tailored skirt and white blouse we had seen the year before.

FRUIT MENUS for TODAY

Spiced Prunes Make Ideal Salad When Served With Orange.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IF YOU THINK that prunes are too unpretentious a fruit to grace your breakfast table, cook them this way, and then make a new decision. Wash and pick over the fruit, cover with cold water and soak over night. Cook slowly until tender, in the same water in which they have been soaked, and add to the water a piece of stick cinnamon and several slices of lemon stuck with whole cloves. Usually the prunes require no sugar, but when lemon is added, the resulting flavor will be better if two to four tablespoons of sugar are added for each pound of fruit.

Leftover spiced prunes may be combined with softened cream cheese or cottage cheese and other fruits to form a delectable club salad plate. Use a divided plate for this salad if possible. In the largest section, place a leaf of crisp lettuce. Top it with a ripe banana which has been peeled and sliced lengthwise. Lay three or four rings of orange on top of the split banana. Place a nest of crisp lettuce in each of the other two sections of the plate. In one place several stoned dates and a few walnuts which have been shelled and halved. In the other place three prunes which have been stoned and filled with cream cheese softened with orange juice and flavored with a bit of grated orange peel. Expert Deplores Blondes' Bleaches

Honey Color, Not Platinum, Favored by Mme. Polly.

Be a honey blonde, not a platinum blonde, if you would do right by your hair. So advises Madame Polly, 77-year-old proprietor of New York beauty shop, who has served many famous beauties including Lillian Russell, Marie Dressler and Sarah Bernhardt.

Madame Polly maintains that the bleach used in giving the platinum ecect causes blisters. "I do none of it," she said, "I make them honey blondes."

Madame Polly also advises both for men and women the washing of the face with cold cream instead of water and soap.

W. Virginia's Roads Funds Wait for Use

Commissioner Lacking to Let Contracts for $8,620,000 Work.

U. S. Approves Pooling of State and Federal Appropriations.

By Robert H. Horner,
A Special Correspondent.

Charlesston, W. Va., Aug. 11.—If West Virginia had a State road commissioner at this time he could let to contract immediately a total of $8,620,000 worth of primary highway and grade-crossing elimination projects. This information should come as welcome news to a State that for two years has seen very little road construction because of a lack of finances.

Yet it is true that the money is available. It may be obtained by pooling Federal and State funds, and plans to do just this are now under consideration by Mortimer W. Smith, chief engineer of the road commission, who has been in charge of the road organization ever since Ernest L. Bailey was removed from the commissioner's post three weeks ago by Gov. H. G. Kump.

The State and Federal funds may be pooled for immediate use, despite a deficit of $1,021,830, which Gov. H. G. Kump on Saturday announced existed in the general road fund. Kump is expected to explain later in detail the cause of the deficit.

Pooling Authorized.

What is preventing Mr. Smith from acting immediately is not known. There is no denial that many new roads are badly needed. In a few more weeks the road-building season will close, and, unless there is speedy action, none will be built this year, and it will be far into 1936 before West Virginians see any new major road projects completed.

The funds that are immediately available are: $2,231,000 already allocated from the Works Progress Administration to be let to contract; $1,356,000 of regular Federal aid funds and $1,356,000 of State funds to match it, available from the revolving bond funds; $1,000,000 additional State funds available from the revolving bond funds and $2,677,000 already allocated by WPA for grade crossing eliminations to be let to contract.

The pooling of these funds was authorized by the Federal Government so long as PWA funds were used in such a way as to provide employment of 3,500 men now on relief, allowing to each man $1,400 a year, the sum including also the cost of materials and equipment. By pooling the funds, it is said, not only will the 3,500 on relief be given employment with private contractors, but 4,000 additional men will be similarly employed.

Kump Seeks Man for Job.

The plan was presented to Mr. Bailey before he was removed from office, it is said, but he is understood to have rejected it without fully going into details. Since his departure from the commission the West Virginia Contractors Association, whose membership has been hungry for jobs for the last two years, has sponsored it before Chief Engineer Smith, and Mr. Smith has been giving it earnest study.

However, there has been hanging over Mr. Smith's head daily a threat of the appointment of a new road commissioner, and, it is said, he hesitates to act because the responsibility would be a great one and he is loath to assume it under the circumstances.

Meanwhile, Governor Kump has been devoting his energies to searching for a man to take the commissioner's job. Several prominent business men, it is said, have turned it down. Roy Hornor, of Clarksburg, and John T. Morgan, of Charleston, both business men of high standing, are said to have been urged by the Governor to take the place, but both declined it. These men are said to have refused because of the vast problems of finance which now rest with the commission, and also because the present administration has only about 18 months to run.

Harry P. Henshaw, of Berkeley County, who was a member of the old three-member commission, and who is now secretary of the West Virginia Railroads Association, has been recommended to the Governor, but it is said the Governor would hardly offer the place to a man he let go at the beginning of his administration.

Mr. Henshaw is a conservative and is known as a "problem solver." Before he was appointed to the commission by Gov. W. G. Conley about four years ago, he was a member of the State Senate, where, as a minority member, he was the mainstay of the Republicans. Mr. Henshaw knows the State's problems, he knows men and knows politicians, and is said to be the very type the Governor now needs to help him out of his troubles.

But it is said the Governor fears Mr. Henshaw's political activities, and he is said to fear that if Mr. Henshaw should be appointed Senators M. M. Neely and Rush D. Holt would holler "utility control." Nevertheless, those who know the man say that Mr. Henshaw is capable of doing more good for the State now than any Democrat the Governor might call upon.

Famous Island Camp Meeting Is Opened on Eastern Shore

By the Associated Press.

Crisfield, Md., Aug. 11.—Famous since the days of the Revolutionary War period, when Joshua Thomas, famous "parson of islands," was in the pulpit, the annual Smiths Island camp meeting opened a 10-day session near here today.

The Rev. Dr. E. L. K. Tune, of Hancock, Md., led an early morning devotional service, followed at 10:30 a. m. by the regular morning worship service. Dr. Francis B. Short, of Milford, Del., preached the sermon.

Special excursion boats leaving here carried hundreds of visitors out to the island, where huge boarding tents have been erected adjacent to the scene of the meeting.

The camp meeting was revived last year by the Rev. H. M. Ralph, pastor of the island churches, after it had been suspended several years. Ralph again is directing the services.

While the meeting is in progress, Eastern Shore residents by the score make the island their vacation headquarters, renewing acquaintances in daily get-togethers.

Today's afternoon program included a song service, repeated at tonight's session. The night sermon was delivered by the Rev. J. J. Bunting, former pastor of the Immanuel Methodist Episcopal Church here and present district supervisor.

Farmer Admits Trying Attack On Woman, 82

Hired Hand Confesses He Invaded Bedroom at Night.

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 11.—Sheriff Granville C. Boyle said today that Isaac Johnson, 36-year-old farm hand, had confessed to an attempted attack on Mrs. George Archer, 82-year-old widow, at the aged woman's home a week ago.

Johnson, married and the father of a 12-year-old son, was arrested secretly Friday night and subjected to an almost continuous grilling for 24 hours, Sheriff Boyle said.

He denied the charge until his wife was brought to the jail and pleaded with him to "tell the truth," Boyle said. Late yesterday he signed a confession, the sheriff asserted, admitting he crawled into Mrs. Archer's home last Saturday night and attempted to attack her.

The aged woman, about to retire for the night, was surprised by an intruder in her bedroom and fought with him until he fled.

Announcement of Johnson's arrest and questioning was withheld until precautions could be taken against a possible demonstration by citizens. Mrs. Archer is the widow of a former Harford County commissioner. She is well known in the county.

Lieut. Boxton Ridgely, of the State police, aided by Detective G. L. Ware, of the Baltimore police department, and sheriff's deputies, conducted the questioning in shifts, under direction of State's Attorney D. Paul McNabb and Sheriff Boyle, the latter's announcement stated.

In the alleged confession, Johnson, who came here four years ago from Tazewell County, Va., said he escaped through cornfields surrounding the Archer home after hearing Mrs. Archer ringing a bell for assistance. The bell was kept in her room for emergencies, she told officers.

Johnson will be arraigned before Magistrate Stanley S. Spencer probably tomorrow morning. Visitors to the jail have been banned until further orders from State's Attorney McNabb, although there have been no demonstrations.

City Problem On Sewerage Near Solution

Frederick's Mayor Calls Citizens to Consider Federal Assistance.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 11.—One of Frederick's most formidable municipal problems, dating back 20 years, today appeared on the road to solution.

Mayor Lloyd C. Culler has announced a public meeting for August 19 to discuss the proposed $1,000,000 sewerage system for which the Federal Government has consented to pay 45 per cent of the cost.

Mayor Culler, pointing out that the problem had been a serious one for many years, said the matter should be given immediate attention in view of the fact city authorities have been advised an outright grant of $452,295 has been made from Federal funds for the project.

To assure construction of the sewerage system, citizens must raise an additional $500,000, which probably will be obtained through a bond issue to be voted at a referendum.

Under present plans, the sewerage project would employ approximately 547 men for 16 months—a fact calculated to make a sizable dent in the unemployment total here.

A representative of the State Health Department will attend the public meeting, Mayor Culler said.

Age Pension For Virginia $5,000,000

Revenue to Be Raised Under All Titles Put at $32,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Aug. 11.—Approximately $32,000,000 annually will be raised in Virginia under the three titles of the National social security act, when they become fully operative, a survey showed today.

William R. Shands, legislative research director, has estimated that the cost of old age pensions in Virginia will be about $5,000,000 yearly, half of which will be borne by the Federal Government and half by the State.

Whether the State will participate in this phase of the security program will be determined by the General Assembly, many of whose members are already on record as indorsing the pension plan. How the State's contribution will be raised remains to be answered by the legislature.

Unemployment Phase.

The unemployment insurance phase of the National program, which becomes effective regardless of the action of the States, levies a 3 per cent tax on payrolls, to be borne by the employer. This title of the act will raise about $9,000,000 a year in Virginia, Major F. P. Evans, statistician of the Industrial Commission, has estimated. His calculations are based on the approximately $300,000,000 annual aggregate payroll of industries in Virginia.

This 3 per cent tax does not become fully effective for several years, beginning at a smaller figure and gradually increasing until the maximum is attained.

John Hopkins Hall, commissioner of labor, has pointed out that the 3 per cent pay roll tax means a tax of less than one per cent on the manufacturer's cost, as the average pay roll is only about 20 per cent of the total cost of manufacture.

A total twice as large as that produced as by the unemployment insurance feature will be realized from the plan for annuities for retiring workers, Maj. Evans has pointed out.

This phase of the program, according to the latest information on the bill obtained here, provides for a 3 per cent tax on the industrialists' pay roll and a 3 per cent contribution by each worker, based on his wage.

$18,000,000 More Provided.

Thus, on the basis of the $300,000,000 considered to be Virginia's aggregate annual pay roll, another $18,000,000 would be collected each year when this part of the law becomes fully operative.

The annuities phase, however, likewise begins at a fraction of the 3 per cent tax and 3 per cent wage contribution and is scaled upward until the full amount is reached. Payments from the reserve thus accumulated do not begin until 1942.

The purpose of the annuities plan is the accumulation of a reserve fund out of which workers can be paid a fixed pension when they retire from industry at 65. Unlike the old-age pension, the annuities fund is built as a self-perpetuating reserve of a national scale and is not dependent on contributions from the State though the Federal Government is required to contribute if payments exceed income to such an extent that this becomes necessary.

Republicans of Senate in Maryland Show More Friendliness.

Session at Ocean City Moves to Have Beale Reform Banking.

By the Associated Press.

Ocean City, Md., Aug. 11.—A general atmosphere of amiability, apparently a reaction from the feeling of "getting something off their chests," clung today to the Ocean City headquarters of Gov. Nice's severest critics—the Republican members of the State Senate.

Numerous conferences and secret sessions were held during the day, but the main business of the two-day gathering apparently concluded with last night's three-hour open meeting when the senators:

1. Passed a resolution asking that Senator J. David Baile be appointed to reorganize the banking situation in the State, repudiating the gross receipts tax, and favoring an income tax to reduce real estate taxation.

2. Heard William P. Lawson, chairman of the G. O. P. State central committee, hail the Governor as the next Republican presidential nominee and the outstanding figure in the party.

3. Made individual speeches, for the most part subjecting the Governor to a series of criticisms on various points of his administrative policy.

4. Heard reports that Secretary of State Thomas F. Dawson had resigned, and that his resignation had been accepted by the Governor. The reports were emphatically denied at Dawson's Montgomery County home by Mrs. Dawson, who said her husband was ill, but that he "had not even considered such a thing."

An early executive session marked the conclave last night, during which the Senators passed the following resolution:

"Knowing sentiment against the steadily mounting cost of Government, we favor the utmost economy in all departments of both State and Federal governments; budgets must be balanced through reduction in cost of government, not merely by invention of new forms of taxation.

"Believing that the banking situation in Maryland should be corrected in accordance with the pledges made in the Republican platform, we favor the appointment of Senator J. David Baile as the first step in accomplishing this much needed reorganization.

"We believe that the 1 per cent gross receipts tax should be replaced by luxury taxes, these later to be repealed as soon as the relief situation is corrected. We are absolutely opposed to a consumers sales tax; we favor an income tax in order to reduce the tax on real estate.

"The sole purpose of this conference was to build up party harmony and to insure good government in Maryland."

Six Men Are Jailed at Savage For Robbing Trucks in Motion

Gang Operating Against Boulevard Traffic Is Believed Broken Up.

With six men convicted on larceny charges at Savage, Md., State police yesterday said they believed they had broken up the hijacking of produce trucks on the Baltimore boulevard.

The six were convicted Friday night before Justice of the Peace J. I. Trobaugh on charges of stealing 63 pounds of butter from a Culpepper, Va., dairy truck.

James Richard Sherman, 25, said to have been driver of the auto that pulled up alongside the moving truck to receive the stolen goods from the hands of confederates, was given six months in the House of Correction.

Pete Osburn Kniseley, 19, received three months in the House of Correction. Harvey Merson, 18; Elmer Gray, 19; Melvin Gray, 17, and Lester Kniseley, 19, brother of Pete Kniseley, all were sentenced to 30 days in the Ellicott City jail. The defendants were all from Savage.

Corporal C. W. Cubbage of the State police, who made the arrests, said numerous trucks bearing shipments of produce to the northern markets had reported losses between Washington and Baltimore.

He said he believed the sextet responsible for these losses. Describing their methods of procedure, Cubbage said one of the men would swing aboard the trucks and pass the products to another man standing on the bumper of the auto, who in turn passed it to a man on the running board.

The six were arrested when a passing motorist, who saw them "lifting" from the dairy truck near Savage, called police.

Chain Bridge Parties Popular in Baltimore

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 11.—Now it's a chain bridge party.

This is the way it works:

Mrs. Joe Smith holds a bridge party. Each of the four visitors attending puts up 25 cents. Mrs. Smith takes charge of the resulting $1, sends it to the woman whose name tops a list of five, and adds her own name to the list.

Thenceforth, it's like other chains. The top name comes off, the hostess gives a copy of the list to each guest, who holds a bridge party under the same rules.

Poultry Tattoo In Maryland Parley Subject

Meeting at University May Bring Formal Resolutions.

By the Associated Press.

Denton, Md., Aug. 11.—Prospects that the two important poultry meetings at the University of Maryland this week might develop specific resolutions with regard to tattooing and registering poultry were seen here today.

Discussion in the wake of a meeting called by Harry H. Rieck, of Preston, president of the Caroline County Poultry Association, led to anticipation of the action.

Rieck told poultrymen from Denton, Preston, Greensboro, and Whiteleysburg at the gathering here that both State and county associations are advocating the tattoo and registration system as a means of preventing lossess by theft.

Rieck pointed out that the tattoo system is in use in 13 Eastern States and that 800 outfits necessary for the work have been supplied to Western Maryland producers. Livestock also can be tattooed, he said.

Rieck invited the county producers, whether members of the Maryland Poultry Association or not, to attend the meeting of the association council at College Park tomorrow and Tuesday.

The Northeastern Poultry Producers Council will meet at the same place later in the week.

Two Injured As Manassas Plane Falls

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 11.—Two Manassas men were critically injured when their plane failed to come out of a power dive near Port Royal, Va., late today, and crashed on the Bellgrove farm. Leslie Patrick, 24, owner of the plane, was at the controls. His passenger was Luther A. Alpaugh, 32. Both were brought here to the Mary Washington Hospital and still were unconscious late tonight.

The plane narrowly missed plowing into a crowd of spectators who had gathered to watch two other planes take up passengers from the Rappahannock River town's airfield.

At the hospital Alpaugh, who suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries, was placed on the operating table immediately. He was not expected to live. Patrick, also believed to have suffered a skull fracture in addition to a broken jaw, was said to be less seriously injured.

Alpaugh is the son of Charles Alpaugh, promoter of Lake Jackson on Occoquan Run, 3 miles from Manassas. The son has been employed in building cabins at the resort. Patrick has been employed as a mechanic at the Pence Motor Co. at Manassas. His wife is a Government employe in Washington. Alpaugh has a wife and small son in Manassas.

It was the second plane crash in this vicinity during the week-end. John Norris, pilot, and Peter Lauck, 16, escaped injury yesterday when their plane struck a power line and crashed in the Rappahannock River bed near Falmouth bridge.

New York, Aug. 11.—General Motors today made public a letter to the Government refusing to list individual salaries of its executives, but revealing that 245 of them are paid $10,000 a year or more each.

The letter was sent by Alfred P. Sloan, president of the corporation, to Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Securities Exchange Commission, and was dated July 1. It answered a requirement of the commission, laid down when the corporation applied for permanent registration of its securities, that the compensation of officers and directors be set forth.

Sloan's letter said:

"As a corporation policy, it is believed that the remuneration of the corporation's administrative staff is a personal relationship between each individual involved and the corporation itself. It is held to be highly undesirable and contrary to the interests of the stockholders to approach the question from any other standpoint. On the other hand, it is recognized that the stockholders should be concerned, and have a right to be concerned, as to the cost of administering the business.

Executive Cost.

"This leads to a definition of executive cost, which in this sense is defined as comprising the salary remuneration of the principal executive officers of the corporation; the executive heads of its general administrative staffs; the executive heads of the operative divisions and wholly owned subsidiaries; the four principal functional executives of the more important operating units, and the executive in charge of each of the assembly and manufacturing plants in the United States located away from divisional headquarters and of the overseas assembly and merchandising operations. This executive list includes a total of 160 individuals. As so defined, it involves a cost equivalent, after allowance for Federal income taxes, to 7 cents per share on the common stock outstanding.

"Looking at the subject of executive salary costs from a still broader standpoint, it might be added that there are altogether 245 individuals receiving annual salaries of $10,000 or more as classified below:

Salary Group	Number of Individuals
*$100,000 and over	2
80,000 to $99,999	1
70,000 to 79,999	8
60,000 to 69,999	1
50,000 to 59,999	5
40,000 to 49,999	2
30,000 to 39,999	7
20,000 to 29,999	34
15,000 to 19,999	55
10,000 to 14,999	130
Total receiving salaries of $10,000 and over	245

*None over $120,000.

Suitable Compensation.

"The management of General Motors Corporation is and always has been convinced that the degree of effectiveness and efficiency with which the important problems that arise daily in a business of its magnitude are dealt with, is directly proportional to the aggressiveness and intelligence of the organization's personnel. This is of vital importance to the stockholders. The management further believed in the broad principle of suitable compensation for exceptional work. Again, this compensation should take the form of a reasonable remuneration enhanced by a reasonable financial participation in the results of the business, the success of which depends upon the effective discharge of the great responsibilities on the part of the personnel involved.

Net earnings, including equities in the undivided profits or losses of subsidiary and affiliated companies not consolidated, for the second quarter ended June 30, were $52,219,467. This compares with net earnings of $40,267,090 in the corresponding quarter of 1934. After deducting dividends of $2,294,555 on the preferred stock, there remains $49,924,912, being the amount earned on the common shares outstanding. This is equivalent to $1.17 per share on the average common shares outstanding during the quarter and compares with $0.88 per share earned in the corresponding quarter of 1934.

Net earnings for the first six months of 1935 amounted to $83,729,838. This compares with net earnings of $69,586,813 for the first six months of 1934. After deducting dividends of $4,589,119 on the preferred stock, there remains $79,140,728, being the amount earned on the common shares outstanding. This is equivalent to $1.85 per share on the average common shares outstanding during the first six months of 1935 and compares with earnings of $1.51 per share for the corresponding period of 1934.

Net sales, excluding inter-divisional transactions, for the second quarter ended June 30, 1935, amounted to $343,209,067, compared with $309,706,468 for the second quarter of 1934. Net sales for the six months ended June 30, 1935, amounted to $594,883,990, compared with $519,677,906 for the corresponding period of 1934. There results a gain of 10.8 per cent in net sales for the quarter under review and for the first six months period, a gain of 14.5 per cent.

Major Indices Reflect Gains In Most Fields

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 11.—The Associated Press weekly index of industrial activity declined moderately this week, reflecting a sharp reduction in automobile production, coincident to summer shutdown of Ford plants.

The industrial activity index, which is adjusted for seasonal variation and based on the 1929-30 average as 100, was placed this week at 72.6; previous week, 74.6; year ago, 65.7.

	Lat. Wk.	Prev. Wk.	Yr. Ago

Farmers' Income Is 7.4% Higher

Government benefit payments to the farmers in the first six months amounted to $305,000,000 this year, as against $149,000,000 last year. For the same period, income from the marketing of farm products rose from $2,366,000,000 in 1934, to $2,670,000,000 in 1935. The increase in benefit payments added to the increase in receipts from marketing, resulted in a gain of 13.8 per cent in total from cash income, as compared with a year ago, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

The increase in the prices of goods bought by the farmers amounted to only 6.0 per cent, so that the farmers' purchasing power during the first six months was 7.4 per cent higher than in the corresponding period last year.

As compared with the low for the depression in the first half of 1932, the farmers' purchasing power this year was 20.3 per cent higher, but it was still 32.0 per cent lower than in the first half of 1929.

United Air Express Grows 43 Per Cent

Chicago, Aug. 11.—United Air Lines carried 346 tons of air express on its New York-Chicago-California and its Seattle-San Diego routes the first six months of this year—43 per cent more than the 241 tons flown in the same period in 1934. Each month this year has shown an increase in volume of air express carried.

This increase is attributed to faster and overnight service from Atlantic and Great Lake cities to all nine major Pacific Coast points, more frequent schedules and the growing tendency of shippers to use air express for regular shipments as well as for emergency purposes.

Refrigerator Sales Near New Record

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—The large increase in sales of electric refrigerators during the forepart of 1935 promises to carry the total for the full year up to a new high record of about 1,600,000 units, according to a report by Fitch Publishing Co.

Last year's sales numbered 1,382,000 units, the report said, and in 1933 they were 1,064,000.

Steel Advances Another Point To 48 Per Cent

Fabricators, However, See Peak of Rise Which Began in July.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 11.—While steelworks operations advanced one more point to 48 per cent last week, new commitments were in lighter volume, and steelmakers believe the current rate represents a peak in the rise which has been under way since the first week in July, states the magazine Steel.

Although opinion in the industry is that the industrial improvement has gained too much momentum to be checked, except temporarily, the steel works rate is expected now to move in a lateral direction before a further gain.

The current leveling-off in orders is due mainly to interruptions in the automobile industry which last week experienced one of the sharpest declines in output this year, assembling only 48,600 cars, or 20,800 less than in the preceding week. Preparatory to its transition to new models, the industry has placed large tonnages, and releases on these are expected late this month or in September.

Steel's sensitivity to automobile manufacture never was more apparent. An exceptionally high proportion of finished steel produced this year has gone into automobiles, estimated as 30 per cent. Automobiles absorbed only 20 per cent, as an average in the prior three years, and only 15.4 per cent in the years 1925-30 when steel distribution was "normal." That industry now has made more cars this year than it did in all 1934, while finished steel output for seven months is only slightly higher than in the first seven last year.

Farm implement and equipment manufacture is expected to carry through this year at a high rate, with operations 75 per cent of 1928-30. Tractor output is accounting for 60 per cent of the industry's business, whereas usually it represents only 35 to 40 per cent. Led by rural buying, black and galvanized sheet production is up to 65-70 per cent, and output of full-finished sheets, largely for automobiles, has advanced 6 points to 61 per cent, contemplating early shipping instructions. Tin plate production is down several points to 85 per cent.

No. of Issues	Type of Issue	Total
10	Commercial and Industrial	$41,435,000

Dawes Stands Pat As Economic Seer

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—Security prices rise, hogs hit 1929 price levels, steel operations continue to advance, but Gen. Charles G. Dawes, the economic prophet who predicted their upswing, remains silent. He said last winter that a vigorous upswing this summer would signalize the end of the depression.

The General has permitted himself but a single comment on his critics who as late as the last of June asserted that economic skies indicated no portent for the shower of orders he had predicted for the durable goods industry this summer.

Lehman Corporation Assets Back at Par

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—For the first time since its organization six years ago with paid in capital of $100,000,000 accruing from the sale of 1,000,000 shares of capital stock, Lehman Corporation's net assets have recovered in value to a point sufficient to show $100 a share on the stock outstanding.

The corporation's present breakup value compares with $93.98 on last June 30.

Tide of Industrial Profits Heartens Wall Street Bulls

Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, Aug. 11.—Wall street decided that business recovery was prepared for a new spurt and bid industrial share prices up to new top levels since 1931 during the past week.

Another large batch of second quarter and first half earnings reports indicated that industrial corporations were in the aggregate raking in the best profits since 1931.

Despite the improvement in corporate earnings, some Wall street analysts cautioned that share prices were getting high, that in a number of instances price-earnings ratios were beginning to resemble those of the days of 1929.

Buyers Are Confident.

Nevertheless, buyers of shares seemed ready enough to bet on continued business recovery which would soon justify price levels. The extraordinary vitality shown by business during this usually quiet vacation season was widely accepted as auguring a brisk autumn.

Some analysts, particularly those addicted to following charts, pointed out that a vigorous upswing in industry and trade after Labor Day should for the first time lift business out of the rather narrow range in which it has been fluctuating for the past two years, that is, since the extraordinary revival of the summer of 1933, when the inflation flurry gripped the country, and manufacturers strained their resources to produce as much as possible before NRA took effect.

Automobile production the past week went into a rather pronounced slump, chiefly reflecting shutdown of the Ford plants, but this is the between-seasons period when a lull is anticipated. In fact, the slump was regarded as past due. Manufacturers usually active at this season are going forward full tilt in many instances. Woolen mills were reported running virtually at capacity.

Durable Goods Reviving.

Wall street optimists were particularly encouraged by further stirrings in durable goods lines. With relief roles still huge and unemployment totals stubbornly holding at menacing levels, most analysts see revival of the heavy goods lines as the keystone to full recovery.

In this connection, General Motors' announcement of a $50,000,000 plant improvement and expansion program attracted attention, following as it did an announcement of a similar program, involving $20,000,000 by Ford Motor Co. In addition, residential construction continues to show large gains over last year, although July has shown a slight seasonal recession from June.

Railroad issues continued to lag in the stock market, failing to get back to the best levels of last January, while industrials reached new average highs since 1931, utilities new tops since 1934, and all groups, as measured by the Associated Press average of 60 issues, new highs since April of 1934.

10% Fall Gain Is Anticipated By Merchants

Best Season in Four Years Forecast by Retailers, Survey Reports.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 11.—The National Retail Dry Goods Association announced tonight that a canvass of more than a score of the country's leading merchants showed an average increase of from 10 to 15 per cent in sales volume was looked for this fall.

"Merchants seem generally of the opinion," said Channing E. Sweitzer, managing director, "that the long, steady upward march of retail business since the summer of 1933 will be continued this fall.

"If the present forecasts for retailing in the fall of 1935 are in any way realized, we shall experience the best fall season since 1931, with beneficial effects on all lines of business."

Abundant crops, the Government works relief program, and the credit-extending activities of the Federal Housing Administration were cited as national auguries, while local developments included the opening of new factories and reduced unemployment.

P. G. Winnett, president of Bullock's, Los Angeles, told the association he believed fall business would show marked improvement "if Congress will go home," but at the same time he looked for a "general comeback in spite of Washington."

William H. Hager, president of the Pennsylvania State Retailers Association, said: "Bitter partisan attacks by the politicians are growing in volume, and radical opposition on the part of the big public service corporations against the Roosevelt Administration, helps to destroy public confidence and is bad for business."

Hotels Pay Less For Food Supplies

New York, Aug. 11.—Average food prices paid by hotels and restaurants during July were 1.51 per cent lower than in June but remained 6.71 per cent higher than comparative prices one year ago, according to the Grinstead Hotel food price index for July which shows the third consecutive decrease—totaling 5.29 per cent lower than the April index.

All items, excepting staples, are lower. Average meat prices declined in July for the first time this year. The percentages of expenditures last month showed greater consumption of fresh fruits, salads, and vegetables, due to hot weather influence on diet, more favorable prices and plentiful markets.

25,551,569 Radio Sets In Use, Survey Finds

New York, Aug. 11.—Of a total of nearly $2,000,000,000 invested in the radio industry approximately 90 per cent of it is in receiving sets, according to a new survey of the Electrical Household Equipment Industry just completed by Poor's Publishing Co.

The number of broadcasting stations has increased from one in 1920 to more than 600, and the number of receiving sets from less than 100,000 to 25,551,569, the survey states.

Associated System Power Sales Up 6.5%

New York, Aug. 11.—Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output for July of 241,522,490 units, an increase of 6.5 per cent above the same month a year ago. This is the largest percentage increase over the same month of 1934 reported for any month this year.

For the 12 months ended July 31, output was 2,815,422,008 units, which is 3 per cent above the 12 months ended July 31 a year ago.

Sales of Power This Year Near All-Time High

New York, Aug. 11.—Sales of electric energy are setting an almost unprecedented pace this year, according to Electrical World. There has been a steady upward trend since May and the rise is continuing. Not only is the output of energy now 8 per cent greater than at the same season last year, but it has surpassed that of the highest peak last winter and is 6 per cent greater than it was at this time in the record year, 1929.

Present indications are that all-time records will be matched within a few months and that the demand for electricity next winter will be above the highest previous peak.

Public attention is usually centered on the domestic use of electricity according to Electrical World, despite the fact that this constitutes only one-sixth of energy sales, whereas more than half of the energy is sold for industrial power. It is this circumstance that makes the present production figures significant as an indicator of improved industrial activity.

Normally, the output is fairly steady during the summer months and rises in autumn to a pronounced peak in the week before Christmas, with a secondary peak coming in January. This year there has been a steady and continuing rise since May to a point which has now surpassed last winter's record.

$50,000,000 Issue Filed by Penn. Co.

An issue of Pennsylvania Co. $50,000,000 28-year 4 per cent secured bonds has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission for registration under the securities act of 1933. The proceeds of the issue will be used for redeeming at 105 the company's 35-year 4¾ per cent gold bonds, due November 1, 1963, now outstanding in the principal amount of $50,000,000, which it is planned, will be called on or about August 31 for redemption on or about November 1. The balance of the funds required for the payment of the principal, premium and accrued interest on the outstanding bonds will be paid out of the treasury funds.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co. are given as the principal underwriters for the issue. The price at which the securities will be offered to the public has not yet been determined.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. owns the entire capital of 2,492,500 shares. As of April 30 the company had total assets of $236,635,259.97.

July Retail Sales Up 14% in Year

The Federal Reserve Board's seasonally adjusted index of department store sales remained unchanged in July at 80 per cent of the 1923-25 average, reflecting a decline in sales from June to July of the usual seasonal amount.

Aggregate dollar volume of sales during the month of July was larger than a year ago by 14 per cent, and on a daily average basis the increase was 9 per cent. The aggregate for the first seven months of this year was 3 per cent larger than for the corresponding period last year.

August Copper Sales Are 16,854,000 Lbs.

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—Sales of domestic copper on Thursday advanced to 3,074,000 pounds from 1,610,000 pounds on Wednesday, it was reported in trade circles today.

This brought total sales for the month to 16,854,000 pounds.

Cotton Plight Has 3 Needs, Revere Holds

First Essential, He Says, Is Free Market, Then Initiative.

New York, Aug. 11.—Admitting that difficulties are still to be encountered in the cotton situation, C. T. Revere, of Munds, Winslow & Potter, says in his weekly letter that there is justification for taking a more hopeful view of the present outlook for cotton than for a long time. The three most imperative immediate requisites for bringing about a healthy market condition and a substantial recovery in prices, he states, may be enumerated as follows:

"First, a free market, permitting, so far as is possible the aggressive assertion of initiative in the distribution of the raw material and its textile processing.

"Second, a restoration as soon as possible of normal contract differences that will facilitate the unrestricted merchandising of the crop through the provision of hedge protection to shippers and exporters, in addition to encouraging forward operations by mills which always find a deterrent in near month premiums.

"Third, the working out of facilities whereby foreign consumers may be able to obtain their requirements of American cotton in normal volume. No one minimizes the difficulties in achieving such a result, involving as it does the problems of foreign exchange, tariff changes and other international adjustments. With the removal of other restrictions, however, there is a stronger probability of progress in this direction.

"Broadly speaking, we believe the time is particularly propitious for American cotton to be given an opportunity to stand on its own merits. For one thing, regardless of what might happen ultimately under certain conditions, we believe that competition from Brazil will be less of a factor than was indicated a short time ago. Crop developments have failed to measure up to earlier prospects, and in addition to this it is becoming more clearly evident that Brazil has materially oversold herself for export. Prices are no longer on a threateningly competitive basis."

U. S. Cotton Supply 20,688,000 Bales

New York, Aug. 11.—The world supply of American cotton for the current season, as computed on the basis of the Government crop report issued last week, will be about 20,688,000 running bales, according to the New York Cotton Exchange Service. This indicated supply compares with 20,361,000 last season, 24,466,000 two seasons ago, and 26,189,000 three seasons ago.

In predepression years, the average carryover was about 5,000,000 bales and the average crop about 15,000,000. Hence, the average total supply was about 20,000,000 bales, it is pointed out by the Exchange Service. However, in predepression years the average world consumption of American cotton was about 15,000,000 bales, but last season it was only 11,314,000.

Bank and Surety Stocks at Highs

New York, Aug. 11.—New York City bank stocks again attained new high levels for the year during the past week. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on August 9, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, reached a new peak of $1,610,836,000. The new high compares with a low point for the year of $1,226,175,000, reached on April 30.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market also sold at the year's best prices during the past week. The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues reached a new high of $643,174,000 at the close of business on August 9. The low for the year, reached on March 14, was $484,613,000.

World Sugar Parley To Be Held in London

London, Aug. 11 (AP).—An international sugar conference to cope with over-production will be held in London next year, the agricultural ministry announced today.

The session has been called to devise a new agreement to replace the Chadbourne plan for limiting exports which expires in the autumn.

Burley Tobacco Up 67 Per Cent in Year

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 11.—The average price of type 31 United States air-cured burley tobacco in the week ended August 10 was 15.9 cents a pound, compared with 16.5 cents in the preceding week and 9.5 cents in the same week a year ago, according to H. A. Stich, tobacco economist.

Canada's March To Prosperity Is Sustained

Each Month of This Year Has Registered Gain, Royal Bank Says.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 11.—Consistent gains in Canadian business and industry are shown in current surveys by economic authorities.

The Dominion, which faced depression along with the United States and the rest of the world, appears to be entering a period of sustained recovery in most lines. The Royal Bank of Canada, Montreal, said in its monthly bank letter:

"In each month of 1935 there has been an improvement as compared with the corresponding month of 1934, and in May the official index of the physical volume of business for the country reached a new high of 103.2."

Reports since that time show the Dominion has faced seasonal recessions in some lines, but others have advanced. Automobile manufacturing has fallen, as it has in the United States, but steel production in July rose above the comparatively high level of the previous month, a situation which also obtained in this country.

Export Trade Dips.

The Canadian Bank of Commerce, Toronto, found that although export trade has been on a declining scale and numerous industries have been adversely affected by this development and seasonal influences, there have been elements of a stimulating character in agriculture, construction and tourist trade to hold general business at the comparatively satisfactory level it reached in the upturn of the late spring.

Export trade during June suffered through decreases in shipments out of the country of such items as wheat, farm products, aluminum, lead and nickel.

On the other hand the exports of forest products, copper and asbestos did not increase enough to offset the fall in the other lines, but at the same time there was a fall in the volume of goods imported by Canada during June.

"Preliminary reports for July," said the Canadian Bank of Commerce, "indicate but little change on both sides of the foreign trade account, and it is to be hoped that with the improved outlook in Europe and the United States . . . our export industries will regain the ground lost early this summer."

The outlook of the agricultural communities was found to be favorable because of the prospects for the harvesting of satisfactory crops.

The Royal Bank of Canada, however, declared:

"The marketing of a substantial wheat crop will present considerable difficulty, as stocks from last year are still heavy, and the carryover at the end of the present season will show little, if any, reduction from a year ago."

San Francisco Stocks Record Year's Highs

San Francisco, Aug. 11 (AP).—A growing demand for equities established ten new highs among the 54 issues traded on the San Francisco Stock Exchange today.

American Telephone and General Motors made new highs for the year on the Curb.

Greyhound Dividend.

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—Directors of the Greyhound Corporation have declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 per share on the preferred stock, series 1, payable October 1, 1935, to stockholders of record September 1.

World Output Gains in Nearly Every Country

Unemployment Is Higher in the United States and France.

New York, Aug. 11.—World production advanced further during the month of June, according to the regular monthly statement of the National Industrial Conference Board. Increased activity occurred in all of the major countries except France, Holland, Switzerland, Chile and Canada. Building activity in England continued to increase; for the month of May, the volume of construction was 121 per cent above the average for 1924 and 67 per cent above that for 1929. Production in Canada in June was approximately 4.8 per cent higher than a year ago, against an increase of 2.5 per cent in the United States over the same period. Japanese output continued to expand, but at a constantly declining rate.

Production.

The following table shows the increase in production during the first part of 1935 and during the past 12 months for the more important countries:

Country	Percentage Change Since Dec., 1934	Percentage Change For Past 12 Months
Canada	+ 0.6	+ 4.6
Germany	+12.0	+17.1
Great Britain	+ 2.7	+ 4.6
United States	nil	+ 2.5
Chile	+ 5.6	+17.7
France	nil	— 7.9
Italy	+26.6	+26.9
Netherlands	— 2.6	—11.0
Sweden	+ 5.2	+ 8.2

International trade in May was higher in terms of gold than in any preceding month of 1935, but was 4.2 per cent lower than the average for the last quarter of 1934. The total value of foreign trade for 76 countries was 1.2 per cent higher than in May, 1934.

Unemployment.

Unemployment declined during June in Germany, France, England and Denmark but increased 1 per cent in the United States. The estimated changes in unemployment during the first part of 1935 and for 12 months were as follows:

Country	Percentage Change Since Jan. 1	Percentage Change For Past 12 Months
Canada	— 8.7	— 9.0
France	— 3.9	—29.6
Germany	—27.9	—24.3
Great Britain	— 5.0	— 2.7
Italy	—21.5	—19.8
United States	+ 0.7	+ 6.0

Durant Seeks Fortune Again In the Market

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 11.—A quiet little man of 73 again is working full time these days, attentive to the latter day problems of reaping millions in Wall street.

A carriage maker in the horse-and-buggy days, a millionaire before 30, and later owner of the controlling interest of General Motors until the market smash of 1920, Durant is back in the market in which he won millions, only to lose them in 1929 and 1930.

Although he declined to be quoted, the tone of his remarks left little doubt that he is confident of both his own future and that of business at large.

In front of him on a huge glass-topped desk lay the only testimony of his activity: A carefully whittled yellow pencil, a foolscap white pad with finely written figures arranged in neat columns, and at his left six telephones.

For one around whom there have grown up so many Wall street legends of power he presented a rather quiet picture. Twice within an hour his telephones rang.

No Complaints to Offer.

Between calls he ran through a brief history of the bull market of the late twenties, noting that things are different now. He had no complaints about present Wall street restrictions.

Short, with sparse white hair, dark eyes and deeply wrinkled skin, Wall street's one-time leading bull dispenses with all of the antics of the stock trader of fiction.

No charts or pictures hang on the simple walnut paneling of his office. Never once does he fish into the deep wicker basket into which the chattering ticker is dropping the share prices.

Smaller Steel Companies Have Better Earning Record

New York, Aug. 11.—Reports of steel manufacturing companies for the June quarter show that the smaller units in the industry fared relatively better than the large organizations.

In the compilation herewith presented seven representative manufacturers are represented. Comparison is with the second quarter of last year, which brings this year's results side by side with one of the best quarterly periods the steel industry has enjoyed since the depression began.

Profits were the rule during that period and they were substantial, as the following figures show:

Second Quarter Net.	1935.	1934.
Inland Steel	2,392,516	2,129,198
Jones & Laughlin	44,412	886,252
Ludlum Steel	147,024	228,774
Republic Steel	922,329	964,125
U. S. Steel	d 732,493	5,396,241
Wheeling Steel	668,300	1,134,511
Total	$6,775,486	$14,034,743

d—Deficit.

The results show that the United States Steel Corporation, which reported larger profits than any other manufacturer for the second quarter of last year, was the only one in the list this year to show a deficit after deducting reserves and interest. Two of the independents—Inland Steel and Republic—did better than they did in the second quarter of last year.

Earnings for the first half change the picture. It is found that in the aggregate net profits were larger this year than for the first half of last year:

Six Months Net.	1935.	1934.
Bethlehem Steel	$1,193,611	$2,239,598
Inland Steel	4,858,307	3,233,736
Jones & Laughlin	d 750,377	d 1,038,272
Ludlum Steel	345,535	375,642
Republic Steel	2,756,564	805,443
U. S. Steel	d 2,396,294	d 1,639,724
Wheeling Steel	1,620,870	1,076,118
Total	$12,347,841	$8,030,596

d—Deficit.

Here again the independents or small companies did make a better showing than the large units. Inland Steel and Republic stand out for performance this year.

What Wall street is now interested in is what second half results will be. So far the third quarter has presented a strong contrast to the conditions prevailing a year ago, when steel making slumped badly. Some steel authorities believe that the improvement will be maintained. Should that prediction prove correct the second half of 1935 should make a much better showing than the second half of 1934.

"Divergence in experience among the different industrial groups and even within the same field of activity notwithstanding," the report continues, "corporation incomes topped out on a new plateau at midyear. Aggregate incomes of 350 leading companies tabulated by Business Week rose to $417,000,000 for the half year, 17.1 per cent higher than in the same 1934 period." The tabulation follows:

Nats Beat Red Sox, 4-2; Lose Second, 5-4, on Bolton's Error

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

Boston, Aug. 11.

WIN, lose or no dice in his bold bid for the Boston Braves, George Preston Marshall can gaze at the multi-mirrored walls of his sumptuous Washington abode, adjust his tie perhaps, expand his chest and regard himself as quite a fellow irregardless, as we say in our set.

POVICH.

No millionaire, Marshall has made an offer for the Braves that is so ridiculously low, so absurdly out of line that it is another form of insult of the muchly abused Boston club. Were the same proposition submitted to the Braves' owners by other than Mr. Marshall their first impulse would be to direct a swift boot at both the bidder and his offer, with the admonition that this is no time for joking and with the further warning that the State had a place for cranks.

But not Mr. Marshall, no indeedy. Charles F. Adams, controlling stockholder in the Braves, is not laughing him off. Mr. Adams knows that George Preston Marshall is not a man to be laughed off. He has heard about Marshall, it seems—how he ran a one-horse laundry into the biggest chain south of New York; how successful he is in promoting enterprises with other peoples' money. He knows that Mr. Marshall has always been quicker to dig up a financial angel than Dillinger was to draw a gun.

Mr. Adams knows how easy it was for George Preston Marshall to uncover some Back Bay backing for his Boston Redskins football team and promote himself and his backers into gilt-edge pickings where none grew before in Boston. He knows all of these things and that's why he's going to Washington on Wednesday to talk things over with Mr. Marshall, who must have been pretty persuasive in his own arguments up here last week.

NO greater compliment could be paid George Preston Marshall's business acumen than the mere fact that Mr. Adams is even considering his offer. Marshall's proposition, which he says is backed by a New York group with himself as the chosen head, falls far short of the cash offer submitted by two other groups. Balancing offer against offer, Marshall and his group are running a distinct third in the cold figures, but Adams has intimated that he is not being guided by what will be laid on the line.

Independently wealthy, owner of a chain of New England grocerys and majority stockholder in the Suffolk Downs race track, Mr. Adams is eager to retire from baseball, but nurses a genuine desire to leave the Braves in good hands. And that is where Mr. Marshall comes in. George Preston Marshall, his dash, his color, his showmanship and his business methods, fit Adams' idea as to what the new owner of the Braves should be.

Of the other bidders, Mr. Adams is not so sure. He can sell outright to the O'Malley Associates, a Boston advertising firm, but he doubts that they would do right by his Braves. He can sell, too, to another New York group whose offer tops both Marshall's group and the O'Malleys, but here again Adams wants to make sure that it is not a coldly commercial proposition that would strip his Braves of talent and consign them to the ruck of the league.

So, Adams finds himself entertaining Marshall's offer to take up the $100,000 note now held by a Boston bank, peg the value of the Braves' stock, pay off the stockholders, with the exception of Mr. Adams, at the pegged price five years from the date of purchase if they wish, install himself as head of the club, and permit Mr. Adams to retain more than a $300,000 equity in the team as a reward for entrusting Marshall with the control of it. The only thing Mr. Marshall hasn't asked for, for his $100,000, is a deed to the State capitol with its gold dome.

THE deal has another possible Washington angle and that's where Bucky Harris comes in. Under any conditions of sale, Mr. Adams has stated almost explicitly that Bill McKechnie, manager of the Braves, must be retained in an official position with the club. Marshall would agree to that, but the disposition he would make of McKechnie would be contingent on his success in luring Harris from the Washington club.

Compared to the Marshall-Harris friendship, the time-honored team of Damon and Pythias were a pair of mutual snakes in the grass. Harris is Marshall's ideal baseball man. He would want Harris as manager of the Braves. If he came into the club, Marshall would probably boot McKechnie upstairs into the business management and install Harris as the players' manager.

But in those plans he would be sure to strike a snag. Harris, who is virtually certain of another contract with the Nats, would not want to come to the Braves as a manager. Let it be known here that Harris is slightly fed up with the monkey suit of a ball player. He fancies himself something of an executive, and with Marshall he would want the job as general manager of the club, the same position that Eddie Collins occupies with Yawkey's Red Sox.

Harris would not, of course, command or even approximate Collins' $40,000 salary. But he would like the general manager's job, the business of scouting, buying and trading talent and overseeing the club's finances. He was in line with that sort of a job with Washington back in 1924-25 before he outlived his usefulness with the club at that time. And with Joe Cronin married into the family and young Calvin Griffith being grounded in baseball at Chattanooga, a front-office job in Washington appears forever closed to Harris. He'd like to come up here—with Marshall.

By Paul Gallico,
A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Mr. Jack Doyle, the billiard-parlor magnate and odds-on person, is competing in the World Telegram's famous hole-in-one tourney, probably the most interesting and unique golf event in the world and which begins at Salisbury tomorrow morning. Mad Mr. Doyle, who will enable you to place a small wager on almost anything, provided you balance his book, maintains that the odds against making a hole-in-one are 20,000 to 1.

There are some 643 entrants in the tourney and the only qualification for entry is that the contestant at some stage of his golfing career must have made a hole-in-one witnessed by reliable parties. If I had $643 and Mr. Doyle would lay me those enticing odds, I think that I would be willing to bet him a dollar a man for every man Jack entered in the tournament. Inasmuch a there will be some 3,200 shots hit for the cup during the course of play, one ought o hole out.

But I doubt whether Mr. D. would lay you that wager, because while it is a 20,000-to-1 shot on any one man sinking one from the tee in five tries, the odds must drop sharply with a large number hitting at the hole. Someone, almost by the law of averages, is bound to get lucky, although in the time that the freak tournament has been running, there has been only one hole-in-one registered and that by Jack Hagen, professional at the Salisbury Country Club. There have been three previous tourneys and a total of 5,018 shots have been taken at the hole, with only one ace, which makes the actual working odds a little more than 5,000 to 1.

It will be interesting to note if there is any material change in these odds after the firing ceases for this show. There might be three or four aces made or none at all. Except when the professionals are shooting, nothing but pure luck will govern the result. For there is nothing you can do on a short hole but line your shoulders up with the flag and put no more or no less strength into the blow than is needed to carry to the green. What happens after the ball lights depends on how you live.

Sarazen's Great Shot.

The only hole-in-one I ever saw was really a hole-in-two, when Mr. Sarazen holed out a 215-yard spoon shot for a double eagle at Augusta last spring. But to all intents and purposes it became a hole-in-one as soon as Sarazen was within range of the green with a single stroke and his drive put him in position to hit the green on his second.

This famous shot has been called lucky, but I always thought that it was actually the greatest golf shot

Newsom Wins Over Grove In Opener

Myer Is Star at Plate; 35,000 Fans Watch Double-Header.

By Shirley Povich,
A Staff Correspondent.

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—Washington and the Red Sox exchanged gifts today. Presented with the first game, 4 to 2, the Nats returned the courtesy by proffering the final of the double-header to the Boston club, which accepted it, 5 to 4. It was all done by errors, politely committed at the proper moments.

Thirty-five thousand fans who refused to be intimidated by dark skies and the threat of rain saw the defense of the Red Sox crumble behind Lefty Grove in the first game, and then watched Cliff Bolton contribute a town lot error that cheated Ed Linke out of victory in the second.

After Buck Newsom found himself in possession of a gratuitous lead against Lefty Grove and steered the Nats into victory by some superb pitching in the pinches of the first game, Ed Linke had the second game in his grasp only to lose his duel with Wes Ferrell in the eighth inning on Bolton's misplay.

Cronin Booed.

The 35,000, whose hopes for a double victory by the Red Sox were already jolted by their miserable performance in the opener, when they contributed three errors and a passed ball, which figured in all of the Nats' runs, set up vigorous boos for Manager Joe Cronin in the second game as all appeared lost for the Sox.

But with the score against them, 4-3, going into the eighth, all was soon forgiven. Bill Werber led off the inning with a walk and Melillo beat out a bunt to Travis that placed the tying run on second, the winning run on first, with none as yet out. A sacrifice by Dahlgren advanced both runners. Linke appeared to be out of his difficulties when Wes Ferrell hit a sharp grounder to Cecil Travis, whose throw to the plate beat Werber by several feet. But Bolton dropped the ball as Werber crossed the plate and the score was tied at 4-4. It was 5-4 when Cooke doubled to left to score Melillo.

The Nats had wiped out the 1-0 lead of the Sox in the third inning when Kress and Bolton doubled to left and Miles and Myer singled. It was on Myer's hit, a sharp grounder that skidded off Cronin's foot, that the fans, angered by the first defeat, took up the booing of Cronin.

Bill Werber's homer far over the left field fence evened the score again at 2-2 in the fourth, but the Nats gave Linke two more runs in the sixth when Myer singled, Powell doubled and Manush drove 'em both home with a single to right.

Dahlgren Stops Rally.

If there was a hero for the Red Sox in the second game it was First Baseman Babe Dahlgren. He it was who turned back the Nats runless in the eighth inning after Manush had led off with a single. Travis and Strange failed to move Manush along and Bolton was intentionally passed by Ferrell. But Linke drove a sharp grounder between first and second that was ticketed "hit" from the crack of the bat. Dahlgren flung himself at the ball, fell flat toward second, speared it with his glove and, while still prone, threw it to Ferrell at first for a spectacular putout.

The Sox cut a run away from Linke's 4-2 lead in the seventh, when Almada doubled and Johnson singled, and then came the eighth. Linke began to wobble and Bolton's error gave him the final shove.

Washington's attempts to get the tying run back in the ninth, took the form of Myer's third hit of the game, a useless single with two out.

They can never blame what happened in that first game on Lefty Grove, who found himself charged with his eighth defeat instead of his fifteenth victory of the season. But Buck Newsom was responsible for a great deal that didn't happen. Knocked out of the box by the Sox in three innings yesterday, Newsom welcomed today's assignment.

Grove outpitched Newsom, according to the figures, which show but 7 hits for the Nats to 11 for Boston, but given a 3-2 lead in the third inning, Newsom nursed it with such tender care that the Red Sox were turned back runless in the last six innings.

Newsom disillusioned the Red Sox and the 35,000 in the first inning when three singles, the last a bunt by Johnson, filled the bases with

Yanks 6 Games Behind Lead; Drop Two

A's Triumph, 8-4 and 5-4; Foxx Hits Two Homers in First Game.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—The New York Yankees fell six games back of the Detroit Tigers today when they dropped a double-header to the Philadelphia Athletics, 8 to 4 and 5 to 4, while the American League champions were chalking up their ninth straight victory.

Aided by Jimmie Foxx's nineteenth and twentieth home runs of the campaign and another circuit blow by Pinkey Higgins, Carl Doyle, rookie hurler, received credit for winning the first, although he handed out eight bases on balls and had to be helped by George Blaeholder and Johnny Marcum. Lefty Gomez was the losing hurler.

Roger Cramer Stars.

Timely hitting and the great defensive play of Roger Cramer featured the second. The Philadelphia outfielder drove in two of their runs with a double and single and made three brilliant running catches, one in the ninth with the bases loaded.

George Turbeville, another of Conne Mack's rookies, started the game, but after issuing seven passes was relieved in the third by Leroy

5 Other Events Captured by Americans.

By the Associated Press.

Amsterdam, Aug. 11.—Gene Venze, of Pennsylvania, was badly beaten in the finals of two events in an international track meet today, finishing third in both the 800 and 1,500 meter runs.

He seemed in poor condition as he faded in the last 20 yards of the shorter race to allow two runners to sweep by him. He never pressed the Englishman Eeles, who romped off with the 1,500-meter race.

Other Americans fared better, Foy Draper, Kenneth Carpenter and Bill Sefton, all of Los Angeles, and Al Mordeau, of Marksville, La., capturing first places in their specialties. Draper won both the 100 and 200 meter dashes.

Tigers Take 9th in Row; Hike Lead

33,000 Largest Crowd of Season, See Tilt; Kennedy Victim.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Aug. 11.—Behind the the four-hit pitching of Elden Auker, the Detroit Tigers downed the Chicago White Sox, 4 to 1, today, sweeping the four-game series and running their string of consecutive victories to nine.

The victory increased the Tigers' lead to six full games over the New York Yankees, who were defeated twice today by the Philadelphia Athletics.

Although Auker walked three men and hit one, he was invincible with men on bases. Vernon Kennedy, the losing pitcher, gave up only six hits but also put a half dozen men on bases with passes. Three of them scored.

The game was witnessed by a crowd of 33,000, the largest attendance at Navin Field this season. The series also set an attendance mark for the year, 100,000 passing through the turnstiles for the four games.

Gehringer Is Star.

The Tiger attack was effective in the pinches today, permitting the league leaders to take advantage of Kennedy's lapses of control. Gehringer, who made three hits, drove in two runners who had walked in the seventh inning and Auker helped his own cause by doubling behind a base on balls in the fourth.

The four White Sox hits were evenly divided between Piet and Washington, the former scoring the lone Chicago run on a long fly by Appling.

Star Sleuth Hurler Badly Hurt by Pitch

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 11.—Ray Davidson, 1725 Loiner place, Washington, D. C., star hurler of the Bureau of Investigation nine, was seriously injured about the head by a pitched ball in a game with the Annapolis Club today which was won by the Sleuths, 4 to 2. Loss of his services will be a heavy blow to the team, in view of their forthcoming game with the NRA for the Departmental League championship.

Davidson was taken to the Annapolis Emergency Hospital in an unconscious condition and remained a patient there tonight. He was struck near the left ear. Physicians have not determined the extent of his injury pending an X-ray. Davidson was hit in the eighth inning when the Washingtonians broke a 2-all deadlock by scoring two runs to bag the game. Lefty Hollidayoke was on the mound for Annapolis at the time.

Grant Upsets Shields for Net Title

Capacity Crowd Watches Five-Set Victory in Eastern Final.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Bryan M. Grant, jr., Atlanta's mighty midget of the courts, registered one of the season's outstanding upsets at the Westchester Country Club today when he conquered Frank Shields, of New York, third ranking player of the country, to win the Eastern Grass Court Singles championship, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4, 7—9, 6—4.

A capacity gallery turned out for the match despite heavy rains which drenched the courts in the morning.

Shields started off briskly. He served three aces and then broke through Grant's delivery with such ease that it looked as if the match would be a runaway.

Wears Down Opponent.

It was hard work from then on, however, for Grant kept thumping the ball to Shield's vulnerable backhand, and after two and a half hours of fierce battling wore down the moving picture actor. It was the husky, 6-foot-2 Shields and not the 5-foot-8 Grant who lost control through sheer exhaustion.

The contest was fought mainly from the back court, for Shields found early in the match that he was courting disaster when he charged the net. Grant was retrieving his bullet-like forehand drives and whaling them back to the corners where Shields was hard put to reach them.

The break he made through Grant's service in the second game was the wedge by which Shields pried the opening set from the tiny Atlantan. After dissipating a 2—0 lead in the second chapter, Shields was broken through in the eighth game, Grant winning the ninth after deuce had been called three times.

Troubled by Service.

Grant had a definite edge in the third set, although he frequently experienced trouble with his service. After two service breaks had left the score at 4-all, Grant crashed through a second time for a 5—4 lead and then ran out the set.

The fourth set was a marathon affair, with Grant just two points away from victory in the tenth and fourteen games. Shields finally broke through in the sixteenth with the help of a net cord shot to even Woman Mayor, Savoldi 'Draw'

By the Associated Press.

Wildwood, N. J., Aug. 11.—It was give and take between Mayor Doris Bradway, New Jersey's only woman mayor, and "Jumping Joe" Savoldi, the wrestler, at the grappling show here last night.

First Mayor Bradway, irked at the former Notre Dame football ace's rough tactics in the ring, grabbed a stick, reached over from her front-row seat, hit him twice and sent him sprawling.

A few minutes later, Savoldi missed a flying tackle, dove through the ropes, and landed—of all places—in the lap of her honor, the mayor.

Cruickshank's 289 Wins in State Open

Chandler Harper Second, Seven Shots in Rear; Isaacs Is Third.

By the Associated Press.

NEWPORT NEWS., Va., Aug. 11. Firing a scorching 33 for the last nine holes as a parting salute, Bobby Cruickshank finished like a champion here today to win his third consecutive State Open golf championship.

After a shaky afternoon start that disappointed the spectators, Cruickshank turned on the pressure coming home, posted a 73, three over par, and showed a 72-hole total of 289 for first money in the twelfth annual title tourney at Old Dominion Golf Club course.

Seven strokes away with 296 came Chandler Harper of Norfolk, former State amateur champion, who scored his first notable success since he joined the professional ranks. At 297—one stroke away by the margin of a third putt on the eighteenth green—came Jack Isaacs, home club professional.

Earns $150 Prize.

Cruickshank earned $150, Harper $100 and Isaacs $75. Sam Snead, of Hot Springs, was fourth with 296 for $50.

Bobby Riegel, Southern amateur champion, turned in two more consistent rounds of 73—75 for a 303 total that gave him first place among the amateurs. Burr Melvin, Newport News shotmaker, who started the day with a four stroke margin over Riegel, lost his advantage when he soared to 77s for both rounds and finished with 305.

Benny Loving, the long driving Charlottesville professional, who couldn't get his putts down, was fifth among the money players and collected $40, while E. R. Chisholm, of Charlottesville, Alan Brodie, of Richmond, and Nelson Long, of Hot Springs, each with 308, split $80.

Additional Money.

Cruickshank, whose first round 70 yesterday, a par equaling accomplishment, was the best 18-hole score of the tournament, earned $15 additional while Harper's final 71, one over par, gave him $10.

Cruickshank looked every inch the champion as he romped through a fine morning round in 71 although his putting bothered him occasionally. But the real grief came on the outgoing nine of the final round when he started missing the tiniest of putts.

He soared to 40, five over par, to give Harper, Isaacs and Snead their big chance to overtake him, but he doused all their hopes when he came home in 33, the best 9 holes of the tournament.

Six Straight Pars.

After blasting six pars in a row, he picked up a stroke when he laid his approach within 3 feet of the pin for a birdie three on the sixteenth and then, after parring the seventeenth, gained another birdie three on the eighteenth, when he sank a 6-foot putt.

Playing in the same threesome, Jack Isaacs, the home town favorite, trying hard to overcome the big margin Bobby had piled up yesterday, was out in 36 and home in 36 for a highly creditable 72, despite that costly putt on the eighteenth green that cost him money. Meanwhile Chandler Harper, who had given due warning when he scored a fine morning round of 73, burned up the last 18 holes in 71 and stood on the sidelines and watched Isaacs come gamely down the stretch, only to falter on the final green.

Sarron Faces Stern Rival In Temes

Rowan Meets Buffalo in Return Encounter at Stadium.

By Bill McCormick.

PETE SARRON, Washington's No. 1 ring box-office attraction, returns to the wars in the weekly session of sock at Griffith Stadium tonight. Joe Temes, a rough, tough little Greek featherweight who has battled his way from the preliminary ranks, will play straight man to the highly entertaining Pete in the scheduled 10-round feature.

Sarron will be making his first ring appearance since he thumped out a close decision over California Joe Rivers in a thriller at the Auditorium last spring. Pete originally was scheduled to meet Roger Bernard two weeks ago, but the bout was postponed due to an operation on Sarron's right arm for boils.

Pummeled Bernard.

Temes was shoved in as a last-minute substitute for Sarron in the Bernard bout, and greatly to the surprise of everyone but himself and his manager, Gabe Menendez, he pummeled the daylights out of the Rajah. That victory, which climaxed a string of nine wins and one draw, earned him his chance tonight against the nationally ranked Sarron.

On the basis of his upset of Bernard, who was almost an even-money bet to conquer Sarron, Temes looms as a distinct threat to emerge the victor over Pete tonight. Not only is the Greek bulldog very rugged and a better puncher than Sarron, he has been active of late, whereas Pete has been as idle as Max Baer in a Braddock fight.

Nine Victories in Row.

If ring battles were won on records, Sarron would boast a slight edge, although Temes' past performances have not been mediocre by any means. Sarron has earned his present national ranking largely by virtue of nine consecutive major triumphs over such opposition as Baby Manuel, Benny Bass, Frankie Wallace and others.

Temes has won 19 times and worked to two draws in his last 21 starts. Numbered among his victims are Eddie Burl (six times), Charley Von Reedon, Tony Leto, Bucky Burton, Chico Cisneros, Chino Alvarez, Joe Guzman, Baby Miller (knockout), Tony Lopez, Jose Gonzales and others less well known. Burl, Burton and Von Reedon hold decisions over Sarron, which will just give you an idea.

Two colored bouts will feature the preliminary card. In a six-rounder, Meyer Rowan and Gene Buffalo have been nominated to

Blue Laws Halt Races On Altoona Speedway

Altoona, Pa., Aug. 11 (AP).—Pennsylvania's ancient blue laws stepped in today to force indefinite postponement of the 100-mile national championship automobile race just as thousands of would-be spectators were arriving for the spectacle, already thrice delayed because of rain.

District Attorney Richard H. Gilbert, of Blair County, notified the promoters, including his neighbor and close friend, George Stevens, that everyone connected with the race would be arrested and prosecuted if it was held today.

ON the wings of a nine-run uprising in the "lucky seventh," Manassas defeated Arlington, 11 to 2, yesterday to take the leadership in the race for Post Association honors in the Red Section of the Northern Virginia League.

For six innings Jim Tennant and Rice were locked in a pitchers' duel, but a flurry of hits by Blackwell, Saunders, Buckner and Tennant sealed the fate of Arlington in the seventh.

With Biggs, Miller, Tonker and Bowman showing the way, Ballston Athletic Club toppled Falls Church from first place. Ballston won handily, 12 to 1, sewing up the game in the first inning with a seven run explosion. Calvin Hull pitched effectively throughout. Rhodney Furr set down White Star Market with three hits as Middleburg was winning as it pleased, by a 11-0 score.

Two Tie for Lead.

Purcellville and Fairfax Station were still tied for first place in the stirring duel between these leaders for the White Section title. Afforded brilliant 3-hit pitching by young Ed Hammersley, Fairfax Station rudely jolted the pennant hopes of Marshall by its 9-1 triumph. Pete Keyes and Grafton Wells were the dominant figures in Fairfax's win.

Purcellville remained apace with Fairfax Station by trimming Aldie, 14 to 3, in a slugging bee featured by the consistent hitting of James, A. Hall, Benedum and Brown. Wallack, on the mound for Purcellville, turned in a neat hurling effort.

Narragansett Park, Aug. 11.

Dear Al:

Racing returns to the smallest State in the Union in a big way tomorrow. From the looks of the entries for opening day there are enough horses on the grounds to mount the Italian army. Not a race for less than $1,000 and we can expect to see a lot of action before the session ends. Seventeen horses have been named for the Roger Williams Purse, a $5,000 test at a mile, and all the stars of the New England season are taking a crack at it. Weights range from 126 on Time Supply to a mere 104 on Bahamas, and between the two are a lot of speed, fellows. I wired Clocker Mike to transfer to Cumberland for the ten-day session which opens on Tuesday. I would like to visit the western Maryland mountain track myself, and, if the boss will let me, I shall catch the first train, leaving this track to Trainer Joe. BILL.

First race—Infidox will be hard to beat if this juvenile sees action. The clockers have been raving and Lynch will ride. Many Moons is a right sharp maiden. Hollyrood may get a piece of the money.

Second race—Grog showed such rare form in New York that it's hard to pass up this youngster. Meets a speedy one in Zowie, which looms as the one to beat. Songmaker and Festoon might make their presence felt.

Third race—Gold Step was one of the most consistent horses at Suffolk and should like this track as well as the Boston oval. Totes 116 pounds, but I expect a win. Witan is in excellent form and should be close. Merovech to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Cloud Sweeper has made several promising moves and I don't believe I'm wrong in trying to make this one win here. Candy Maid and Good Flavor will be well backed.

Fifth race—Bold Lover might be hard to handle at a mile. Gets a strong rider in Wall and is not too heavily burdened with weight. Time Supply carries 126 over a route that he does not particularly favor. Ladfield is a possibility.

Seventh race—This is a wide-open race. I'm going to take Shot and Shell, Star Fire and Flying Dere, but your guess is as good as mine.

Cox Shoots 68, Teaming With Hollebaugh to Win Exhibition

Treder, Pitt Are Beaten, 4 and 3

Kenwood Pro's Deuce on Second Is Feature of Manor Match.

WIFFY COX, Kenwood's kibitzing professional, cracked out a 68, two under par, yesterday at Manor, teaming with Russ Hollebaugh, long-driving Kenwood champion, to defeat Al Treder and Harry Pitt, host pro and amateur star, respectively, 4 and 3, in an 18-hole exhibition match.

Thus for the fourth straight Sunday did Cox take the spotlight as the main man in the weekly "exhibition sundae." It was his brilliant scoring on the first nine, which he covered in 33, two under par, that enabled his team to take a 3 up lead on the Manor pair, and it was his one-under-fours performance on the back nine that beat off the challenge of the home defenders.

Gets Deuce on Second.

Pitt and Treder won the first hole, but Cox slapped in a nice putt for a deuce on the second hole for a win, and the Kenwood duo took a lead it never surrendered. Pitt played in fine form, too, leveling par with a 70. Treder and Hollebaugh scored 74s each.

Cox picked up four birdies. He was over par on only the fifth and sixteenth.

His card:

Cox	424	354	434	—33
In—par	434	445	434	—35—70
Cox	434	444	534	—35—68

Roland Mackenzie, Congressional pro, and Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase pro, defeated Danny and Allan Burton, professionals at Army and Navy Country Club, 2 to 1, yesterday, in a thrilling exhibition match.

Mackenzie furnished the high-powered scoring with a par 72, while Barnett shot a 73. Allan Burton had 74 and Danny 76.

Three down at the turn, the Burtons fought grimly to overcome their professional brethren, but to no avail. They had a fine chance to square the match on the 314-yard sixteenth. Here Red-Haired Danny missed a short putt for a birdie that would have given his side a win. They halved the seventeenth in par fours.

Frank E. Zuber, with 102—25—77, won the blind bogey tournament at Bannockburn. C. A. Royce, 91—13—78, and Thomas F. Beahler, 95—17—78, tied for second.

A. E. Evenson and Perry Nutwell, with a 63, won the two-ball foursome with handicap tournament at Kenwood Golf and Country Club. J. F. Dorrell and H. D. Sonneman, with 67, were second. L. C. Ashcraft and H. Harrison tied for third with J. E. Sands and Noah Pomery. They had 68 each.

The Gull Annexes Lewes Boat Race

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lewes, Del., Aug. 11.—The new 11-foot Marconi-rigged sailboat, The Gull, owned by Raymond R. Atkins, of Lewes, chalked up her first victory this afternoon in the Lewes Yacht Club weekly handicap races in the Delaware Breakwater. Aided by a good allowance, she finished the one lap race in corrected time of 7 minutes, 57 seconds. The little moth boat was skippered by William Arthur, Atkins' 15-year-old nephew, of Miami, Fla.

The fleet of 13 experienced the toughest time of the season over the triangular course when they set out in a light southeast breeze on a strong flood tide. Before the lap was completed the wind shifted the entire 360 degrees, buffeting the little windjammers all over the course and making it necessary to curtail the event to one lap. Only ten of the fleet finished the race in specified time.

Glen Echo Pool Scene Of Swim Meet Tonight

GLEN ECHO stages its last big swim meet of the year tonight when the District A. A. U. holds its annual 220-yard free-style championships for men and women and its highboard diving championship for men at the park's big Crystal Pool.

Much of the keen rivalry marking the District outdoor championships at Takoma Pool Friday night will be re-enacted as Washington's fastest men and women paddlers splash out for the local titles.

In several of the races, Baltimore's foremost swimmers including big Homan Kinsley, Middle Atlantic sprint champion; Jerry Williamson, young feminine star; Frank Cummings and Margaret Russell will be challenging the local defenders.

One of the outstanding events of the evening will bring out Johnnie Broaddus and Buddy Hodgson, runners-up for the District indoor diving championships, in a struggle for the outdoor title. John Marshall, unattached, and third-place finisher in the Junior Nationals, also will be entered.

Ernie Boggs, of the Y. M. C. A., will be defending his 220-yard free-style men's title with Eric Larsen, of the Washington Canoe Club and E. Murphy, of the "Y" as his chief threats. Boggs is a heavy favorite to repeat.

Rita Augusterfer, women's champion, will not be defending her crown, leaving it a three-way struggle among the three Shoreham lassies, Ann Bono, Betty O'Toole and Lydia Cort. Miss Bono, 50 and 100-yard freestyle title-holder, will be trying the longer race for the first time. The odds are about even on all three girls, the race promising to be one of the high-lights of the local season.

Baltimore swimmers are numerous in the 60-yard freestyle and 180-yard medley in which Washington men and women will be hard-pressed to salvage some laurels.

Ruggerior Flocco, of Philadelphia, holder of the Middle Atlantic, Atlantic Coast, 1932 Junior National and the 1935 Pennsylvania diving championships, will give an exhibition between events off the highboard.

35,000 Watch Nats, Red Sox Split Bill

Newsom Outpitches Grove in Opener to Win, 4-2; Linke Loses 2d.

none out. In that crisis, Newsom forced Cronin to pop up and the Sox got nothing out of the inning when Bluege, Myer and Kuhel converted Rick Ferrell's grounder into a double play.

The Sox began to go sour behind Grove in the third inning, when Dahlgren dropped Cronin's throw and Holbrook was safe on first. Newsom singled to right and then the 35,000 saw the wonder of wonders. Mel Almada, prime favorite of the fans here, made his first error of the season on a fly ball when he dropped Joe Kuhel's easy loft for a two base error and Holbrook scored. Buddy Myer pumped a double against the left field wall and the Nats had their 3 to 0 lead.

It was 3 to 2 before the inning was over. The Sox put themselves back in the ball game when Cronin doubled and Rick Ferrell singled following Cooke's walk.

But in the ensuing pitchers' duel, Newsom was the master of Grove. The Nats picked up their fourth run off Grove in the sixth inning when Powell doubled to center and Bluege drilled a double against the fence in left. The Sox, however, couldn't jar another run out of Newsom. The closest they came to it was in the eighth when three singles by Cronin, Rick Ferrell and Werber filled the bases. That was the situation when pinch hitter Dib Williams drove a line drive into Kress' glove for a decisive double play.

Virginians Defeat Washington C. C.

Howell, Wilshire Take Feature Match.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 11.—The Country Club of Virginia Golf team, playing superbly in every set, swept Washington Golf and Country Club aside to win, 16½ to 1½, over the James River course here today.

Doyle's Odds Against Ace 20,000-1

Pros Know How, Though; Are Not Just Lucky, Says Gallico.

I have ever seen played and that the ball went into the hole because it deserved to do so. Sarazen will tell you that he was shooting to hole out, but what he was actually playing for was an eagle 3. He played his second shot with full intent to get the ball so close to the hole that he would need no more than a short putt to go down. This he had to do to stay in the tournament.

He played that shot for all he was worth, and the double instead of the single eagle was merely the bonus for a piece of perfect execution. Luck had no part in the thing at all. The ball was so bravely, intelligently and perfectly hit from its lie on the fairway that the only kind of luck that could have affected it to any degree would have been bad luck.

Once it left the club head it didn't need any luck. It has headed for the right spot. If it had hit a rock that would have been luck. If the ball hadn't gone into the rough it would have stopped no more than 6 inches from it in any direction, which would have given Sarazen the tap-in he was playing for. Once he had shot perfectly he had every right to expect perfect results.

Judgment Sharpened.

The professional coming to a short hole plays every time to get the ball so close to the hole that he can get his deuce without sweating for it. Because he is a professional his swing is grooved, his muscles trained, his judgment sharpened by years of steady play and competition.

He can figure the wind, the condition of the turf, the roll of the green. Every smallest detail connected with making the shot is planned. If the ball then carries on to the lip of the cup and drops in, the element of luck is very slight even if the shot has been well played. Players who bang their tee shots consistently inside a 10-foot circle, year in and year out, have a right to expect a break and a perfect shot some time.

Entrants Freak Acers.

Many of the players in tomorrow's tourney are freak acers, beknighted sloggers who, on some well-favored day, shut their eyes as was their custom and swiped at the ball in the manner of a man trying to kill a snake with a broom handle, only to have the ball leap gayly from tree to brook, from brook to rock, from rock to trap, and from trap to green and from green to hole. The chances of their ever doing it again ought to be about 100,000 to one.

But I wouldn't like to be sitting on the tee holding the book on a 20,000 to one bet that any professional would can one out of five from the tee. I believe I shall have to take myself a trip down to Salisbury and see this show. It ought to afford a magnificent study in human nature, if nothing else.

Woodstock Victim Of Mt. Jackson, 4-1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., Aug. 11.—Mount Jackson downed the Woodstock Shamrocks today, in a heated contest, 4-1, before one of the largest crowds of the season. Litten, Mount Jackson, allowed but three scattered hits and fanned 11 batters, among whom were Dellinger, Rhinehart, and Coffman, three of the Shenandoah County League's heaviest hitters. Errors proved costly to the Woodstock team, as two runs were accounted for due to blunders in the infield.

Sisters Start Action To Share Hughes Estate

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., Aug. 11.—The Misses Anna and Laura Hughes, of Charles Town, have filed suit in Circuit Court here against Mrs. Laura V. Hughes, widow of Daniel S. Hughes and chief beneficiary under his will, to nullify two codicils to his will. Hughes, a retired merchant of this place, died June 21, 1934, leaving a will dated June 16, 1920, and materially changed by two codicils. The estate was appraised at $97,442.10, although the bill of complaint alleges it was worth $125,000.

Hughes left no children, and his two sisters, the plaintiffs, were provided for by the will proper, but the codicils, made 13 years later, practically erased all bequests to other than his widow. It is charged that the defendant exercised undue influence upon her husband.
